SLAYER OF GIRL IS NOT NAMED

CORONER'S JURY RENDERS VERDICT IN MURDER CASE

Inquest Into Shooting of Alma Armstrong Concluded Saturday Morning—Wound Not Self-inflicted

Without naming anyone responsible for her death, but declaring that the wound from which she died was not self-inflicted, the coroner's jury empanelled to solve the mystery shooting of Alma Armstrong, 21-year-old Pigeon Lake girl, reached a verdict at noon on Saturday.

As handed in by the jury, their verdict read as follows: "Alma Armstrong died at the Royal Alexandra hospital at about 1 a.m. August 25, 1934, from a gun-shot wound in the neck received about 5 p.m. August 24 at 12006 87 street, the same being inflicted by a gun in the hand of some person other than herself."

Jealous infatuation for a girl young enough to be his daughter, was ascribed by the Crown as the motive for the shooting that snuffed out the life of 20-year-old ex-waitress Alma Armstrong of Pigeon Lake for whose slaying Captain Thomas W. "Tommy" Higginson is held, when the official probe into her death got under way in police court Friday afternoon before Chief Provincial Coroner Dr. E. A. Braithwaite and a jury of six.

Twelve witnesses were called and examined by John W. McClung of the Attorney General's department, and cross-examined by Hugh Calais Macdonald, K.C., associated with James Ogilvie and Russell Speers for the defence, before court adjourned at 5 p.m. to visit and inspect the Higginson home, scene of Alma Armstrong's wedding eve slaying.

Several other witnesses are to be called Saturday morning with the possibility of the inquest going over until next week after the Labor Day holiday.

An abrupt ending or a lengthy continuation of the case depends now on the course taken by the Crown to make an Edmonton Bulletin reporter break the code of ethics and disclose the source of information which led to the printing of a story last Wednesday in which it was stated that police were to investigate a report that the Armstrong girl had died following the removal from her throat of

This Quickens Hunter's Pulse

A sight to quicken the pulse of the sportsman and stir the imagination of the epicure is this one, of pheasants flying to freedom from the state game preserves near Toledo, O., heralding the hunting season soon to open in many states. Eric Howard, Ohio state game protector, is freeing the birds, that they may enjoy their liberty at least until guns start popping. Watching release of the birds at the right, is John King, Isaak Walton League representative.

Peace River Area May Be Harvesting Record Wheat Crop

Present indications are that Alberta's average wheat yield over the province for this year will be below the average for the last 10 years, which was 17 bushels to the acre, according to the 10th fortnightly crop report of the provincial agricultural department issued on Saturday. A conclusive estimate, however, will not be possible until threshing is further advanced.

Reports received by the department indicate that damage apparently was done by the frost on Aug. 22 in the central and north central districts, but the full extent of this cannot be known until threshing is under way. The area affected was from Athabasca to Red Deer and from just west of this city to the Saskatchewan boundary.

South and south-west of this city,

FALL SESSION AT OTTAWA IS DISCUSSED

By THOS. WAYLING
Special to The Bulletin

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 1.—The calling of fall session of parliament is considered to be the Prime Minister's present plan of action. He will return from Geneva in October and parliament is expected to be called in November. The session will go on until immediately before Christmas and will adjourn until January.

Mr. Bennett wants to participate in the British celebrations which will mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of George V to the Imperial throne. These take place in May, so that a fall session and a brisk post-Christmas session are necessary to enable him to get away.

LIBERALS OPPOSE MOVE

The Liberals, however, are reported to be opposed to Mr. Bennett representing Canada in London any more. They declare he has lost his mandate and does not represent the people of Canada. Mr. King warned Mr. Bennett at the close of last session that he would oppose the passage of supply, and this opposition may keep parliament in session well into and beyond May.

MAY FORCE DISSOLUTION

Strong opposition to every item of supply will hold parliament and may force Mr. Bennett to dissolution.

The loss to the government of four out of the five federal by-elections will strengthen the Liberal determination to force Mr. Bennett to resign and go to the country, in which case his British visit next May would be out of the question.

Wiley Post Delays Hop To Stratosphere

Mitch' Hepburn Is Happy Warrior Handling Big Job

Everybody in Canada now knows about "Mitch" Hepburn. He has set about to reduce government cost in Ontario. He has reduced interest rates from 5 to 3 per cent. What manner of man is this? You can't understand the political situation in Ontario fully unless you know about Mitchell Frederick Hepburn. The phrase that helps you best to understand him is one of his own pet expressions:

"I am for the man on the back concession."

ALL PEACE MOVES FAIL, 700,000 TO WALK OUT TONIGHT

American Textile Strike is Joined by 100,000 in the Woollen Mills — Zero Hour 11 o'Clock Tonight

By DONALD CAMERON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1. The general strike order for the huge United States cotton textile industry spread tonight to encompass 100,000 woollen and worsted workers further deflating federal efforts for an 11th hour peace pact.

The possibility mounted last night that the entire textile industry might be included in the walkout plan by the time the cotton workers zero hour arrives at 11:30 tonight.

Formal orders for the woollen and worsted strike were dispatched late Friday after Arthur Besse, the chairman of the wool code authority, curtly rejected labor's request for a conference with representatives of the industry.

Peter Van Horn, chairman of the silk code authority, generally, was expected to follow the lead of cotton and wool manufacturers in refusing to meet the union.

Silk and rayon workers still were under instructions to stand by. Should they join up more than 700,000 workers would be under strike orders.

Chairman Lloyd Garrison and his associates on the National Labor Relations Board last night continued hoping against hope that some basis of settlement or compromise might be found. All conceded, however, that efforts thus far have been fruitless.

Confronted by a flat refusal by manufacturers to discuss the issues with the board and the union's committee, Garrison kept in close touch with George A. Sloan, head of the cotton textile institute, and labor representatives. There appeared no present prospect of altering industry's stand.

UNION GOVT. PLOT AFOOT IN MONTREAL

St. James Street Intrigue Boosts H. H. Stevens as New Leader

By THOS. WAYLING
Special to The Bulletin

OTTAWA, Sept. 1—A Union government at Ottawa, with the amalgamation of the Canadian railways as its chief plank, is being intrigued for by the powers of St. James Street, Montreal. The plot proposes the elimination of Mr. Bennett and Mr. King as leaders of their respective parties, with a popular national figure as leader. Hon. H. H. Stevens, because of his break with Mr. Bennett, is now said to be the leader the intriguers have in mind.

The Toronto Mail and Empire, chief Tory organ in Ontario, runs an Ottawa special today saying the move for Union government is reviving in Ottawa and that Mr. Bennett is now inclined to favor it; that Mr. King may be still opposed since he scents victory in the coming general election.

Idealism, Realism Combined In Fact Finding Science

Boston Merchant-Philanthropist Tells Coast Audience Roosevelt Has Proven Barrier Against National Radicalism

VANCOUVER, Sept. 1.—"I am tremendously interested in the future of this North American continent, Canada as well as the United States, and I would gladly join with others in the contribution of a few thousand dollars to:
First, survey and find the economic facts of Canada; and Second, to correlate those facts into their place in practical, national economic planning."

Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant-philanthropist, made this announcement in a luncheon address to a joint meeting of the Board of Trade and the Rotary club in the Hotel Vancouver.

Mr. Filene continued with emphasis: "I am greatly in earnest about fact-finding. For countries, the same as business, cannot be run on opinions. They must be run on facts.

The 73-year-old Boston store owner reiterated his insistence on a belief in Canada.

"Starting with Vancouver," he said, "I am going right "through your country, West to East, to see and meet some of your people and to survey and find the economic facts about it for myself at first hand.

"The particular and peculiar economic advantages of Canada entitle her to a great future in the world. Canada is of the Twentieth Century, and this century is international.

"Does Canada know the vital facts about herself? Are they known in their relation to one another in the economic scheme?"

It was at this point that Mr. Filene made his money offer.

Roosevelt Prevented Revolution

There would have been revolution in America had not Franklin Delano Roosevelt, with a pleasing radio voice, come forth in 1932 to present himself to the electors.

This is the conclusion of Mr. Filene:

"Unquestionably," said Mr. Filene, "I think that some such (radical) movement would have appeared if Mr. Hoover had been elected."

Mr. Filene described Roosevelt as "a barrier against radicalism," and stated that if Hoover had been elected there would very likely have been a revolution in the United States.

The speaker said that Roosevelt could have been a dictator after the election, if he chose.

But he did not. He gave the people of the United States a New Deal, and it was dealt democratically.

Mr. Filene pictured the inauguration of Roosevelt on a day of dire distress for the banks of the country. Banks were closing everywhere.

Roosevelt could have assumed dictatorial powers then, but he decided on a policy more in keeping with the American tradition. He asked Congress to grant him certain extraordinary powers, it is true, but he suggested a course of government by fact-finding rather than the old habit of government by opinion.

(Mr. Filene is probably the most noted fact-finder in the United States).

Roosevelt's first act was to close the banks. It seemed, to the old-time politicians, a radical thing to do, but they had reckoned without the power of the radio.

Appeal to Nation by Radio

By word of mouth to small audiences, Congressmen could appeal to local constituents, but Roosevelt appealed to the nation over the radio.

Unemployment was not a local issue, and by reason of the radio Roosevelt was able to make his appeal generally heard.

He got away from what has controlled the effort of most politicians—the inability of people to "think through" their problems during a mass meeting.

In a mass meeting people cannot think their problems through. They are carried away.

The New Deal was a revolution, but a scientific revolution, because of the invention of the radio. It was the radio that made Roosevelt's popularity after the election, possible.

"Under fact-finding," said Mr. Filene, "Democracy is at last becoming a fact, not merely in American politics, but in American life."

This, said Mr. Filene, did not mean Socialism, with all its concomitants.

If Roosevelt had put up the NRA plan during his campaign he would have been defeated, declared Mr. Filene, for on the surface the NRA is not in keeping with the American tradition of rugged individualism. As a matter of fact rugged individualism is mere social irresponsibilty. It is neither good government nor good business.

Brain Trust Found Facts

Only fact-finding could solve the problem, said Mr. Filene, and Roosevelt with his so-called "brain trust" found facts.

Congress gave Roosevelt power to do as he wished, but the amazing fact is that the Congressmen did not know what they were doing.

Mr. Filene said that one of the striking differences between Fascism and the New Deal was under Fascism all democratic institutions must fall.

The Bostonian ended with an appeal to abolish poverty amidst plenty. He said that unemployment, low wages and unnecessary waste must go.

The annual cost of unemployment in the United States, said Mr. Filene, is 21 billions a year. This is based on a figure of 7 million unemployed, averaging $10 a day, working 300 days a year.

Nation-Wide Swing

"The New Deal was not the result of a political victory on the part of those who favored it," Mr. Filene said. "It was not the result of any nation-wide swing toward radicalism or fascism during the Presidential compaign of 1932.

"The American New Deal is the very antithesis of fascism. It is not only democratic, in harmony with the deep-seated American desire for democracy, but America under the New Deal is much more democratic than America ever was before.

"The New Deal marks the end of an economic era in America. Instead of marking the end of American Democracy, however, it marks the realization of American Democracy.

"Mr. Roosevelt was elected in November, 1932, but did not take office until the following March. In the meantime, an economic situation which, for three years, had steadily gone from bad to worse, came to a head. Thousands of small banks throughout the country had closed their doors.

Jealousy May Be Found Motive In Killing Of Girl

a rubber tube through which she was breathing, by an un-named interne who allegedly did not succeed in replacing the tube supplying the life-giving-air to Alma's rapidly failing body.

Higginson, in whose home the shooting occurred and who is held at present on a charge of murder, was called to the stand at the opening of the inquest, but under advice of counsel, declined to testify. He did not remain in court, but was recalled once for identification.

Statements of the dying girl as heard and noted by Dr. T. H. Field, an ambulance driver, and Detective William McDonald, were read into the records. These statements which the girl is purported to have made contained the words that "Tommy Higginson shot me."

A supposed motive for the slaying was supplied by Detective McDonald who said the girl had told him that "Tommy shot me because I would not make love to him."

Cause of death was set by a pathologist as gun shot wounds in the neck and almost complete severance of the spinal column while Provincial Analyst Kelso swore that Alma "was on the borderline of intoxication" at the time of the shooting. Evidence was adduced that Higginson "had something to drink."

INVOLVED LOVE LIFE

Alma's love life, young as she was at the time of her death, had been extensive, evidence of her sister, Jessie Armstrong, and Steve Anast, whom she was to have married less than 12 hours after the shooting, indicated.

Higginson, and Alma "Totsie," as she was known to friends, "had been going around together for two years or more," Sister Jessie admitted during examination. Higginson had paid her rent and been tolerated by the girl only "because he helped her out financially when she needed it."

While carrying on a friendship with Higginson she had been involved in a love affair, serious enough to contemplate marriage with a Mounted Policeman, now stationed at Kingston, Ontario, and rounded out her list of men friends by agreeing to marry Fruit Store Clerk Steve Anast after a strange courtship of less than two weeks.

On the stand, Anast admitted that they had been living in a common law relationship and only talked of making their status legal on the night prior to her death. They had gone to live together the day after they first met.

An unusual angle of the case was sprung when the Crown called two Edmonton newspapermen to the stand in an effort to learn the source of information that led to the printing of the report in The Bulletin to the effect that police were investigating a report that the girl's death followed the removal of an air tube from her throat by an un-named interne.

ADMITS WRITING STORY

Police Reporter Dick Jackson admitted that he had written the story. Explaining that a reporter's code of ethics would not permit him to disclose the source of information given him confidentially, Jackson declined to answer the question as to who had "tipped" him off and was still on the stand when court adjourned.

Brought up from the cells, Captain Thomas "Tommy" Higginson, the accused slayer, clad in a neat blue serge suit and wearing glasses, entered the prisoners' box and was immediately called to the stand by Mr. McClung.

Calm and composed, Higginson gave quick answers to the stock questions of name, address and length of residence in the city.

"Did you know the girl, Alma Armstrong?" asked Prosecutor McClung at the conclusion of the preliminaries.

Hugh Calais Macdonald then rose and instructed Higginson to answer no questions and the Coroner allowed the accused man to stand down. He made only one more appearance when identified as "the man in the taxi" by a driver for the Grey Line.

Sister of the dead girl, Jessie Armstrong, housekeeper for Mike Vitaly, a miner, was the next witness called and her evidence did much to clear up what up to that time had been conjecture on the events preceeding her death.

THREE WEEKS

"How long did Alma live with you before this happened?" asked McClung.

"About three weeks," replied witness.

Q.—She was a waitress in the Toledo Cafe? A.—Yes.

Q.—She left to room elsewhere? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where? A.—On 102 and 106 streets.

Q.—Did you visit her?. A.—Yes.

Q.—On several occasions? A.—Yes. On Thursday at 9 p.m. August 23.

Q.—Who was present? A.—Steve Anast (Alma's boy-friend), Mike Vitaly (for whom Jessie keeps house) and Muriel Russell.

Q.—Why did you go there? A.—My sister asked me to in order to discuss her marriage which was to have been Saturday.

Q.—Who was she to marry? A.—Steve Anast.

Q.—What state of mind was she in? A.—Very happy.

Q.—Did you know Higginson? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long? A.—Two years.

Q.—How long did he know your sister? A.—A little longer than I did.

Q.—Was he in the habit of seeing Alma? A.—They were out together many times.

PAID HER RENT

Q.—Do you remember Alma being at Higginson's home? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you phone? A.—Yes, late in the evening and I saw and talked to him later. He asked about Totsie (Alma's nick-name) and said that Neil McCuish had taken her home. I said she had not reached home.

Q.—What was he like? A.—Like a maniac. He said my sister had broken his heart and he felt like driving his car off the High Level bridge. She had treated him rotten. I told him it was foolish of him to see her.

Q.—How did they get along? A.—They quarrelled. He said he had never had anything to do with my sister.

Q.—What do you mean, that they were never intimate? A.—He made it no plainer but I took it that way.

Q.—Did you see Higginson on Friday, August 24. A.—Yes and he asked about Totsie.

Q.—What else did you say? A.—I asked him if he knew my sister was to be married Saturday and he asked if I would tell him where she was. I told him she did not want to see him.

Q.—Could you tell when he was in the house whether he had had any liquor? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he have any drinks there? A.—Yes, two. I told him if he wanted to see her very badly I would phone. I did and Alma said if he wanted to go up to see her he could. He asked me her room number several times and then said he wasn't going.

Q.—Did he say what he'd do if she married? A.—He said he was leaving town and that if she married it would be the end of him.

REPEATS CHARGE

Under cross-examination, Jessie told defence counsel Hugh Calais Macdonald of her sister's movements from residence to residence in the city and again said that Higginson had paid Alma's rent.

Steve Anast, the dead girl's boyfriend, told of first meeting the girl when she was a waitress in the Toledo Cafe on the South Side.

Q.—When did you take rooms together? A.—Two weeks last Tuesday. (Aug. 6.)

Q.—Have any plans for marriage? A.—Yes, Saturday, last Saturday.

Q.—Remember the party at your room? A.—Yes, replied witness, and repeated the names of those present as the previous witness had done.

Q.—When did you last see her? A.—Tuesday noon.

Q.—Hear from her later? A.—Yes, by 'phone about 1:30 p.m., when she said she wouldn't be home for supper.

Q.—What was her state of mind then? A.—All right.

Q.—Cheerful about the marriage? A.—Yes.

Hugh C. Macdonald cross-examined, bringing out the information that Anast is a clerk in the California Fruit Store, Jasper avenue, and that he had only known the girl for about three weeks.

Q.—When was marriage first talked between you? A.—Thursday, August 23.

Mrs. Phoebe Ryerse, next-door neighbor when Anast and Alma lived together, told the coroner and jury that she had known the dead girl as Mrs. Anast and had visited with her on more than one occasion.

Q.—You remember Friday, August 24? A.—Yes. She came to my rooms.

EXPECTED COMPANY

Q.—About what time? A.—Around 1:30 p.m. and she said she was expecting company. A few minutes later I heard footsteps in the hall and she went out.

Q.—Did you see anyone? A.—Yes, a man standing at the door who backed in as I came out into the hall.

Q.—Could you identify him? A.—No, only that he wore glasses.

Grey Line taxi driver, Walter Underschultz, told of the office receiving a call to 106 street at 2:25 p.m. Friday where he picked up Alma and Higginson and drove them to 12006 87 street, (Higginson's home). Underschultz identified Higginson as the male passenger of the taxi.

Q.—Were they quarreling? A.—No.

Detective Sergeant Petheram on duty at headquarters Friday afternoon told of receiving a telephone call from a man who announced himself as "Tom Higginson."

"He asked if Percy Appleby was in (a city detective) and I told him Appleby would not be on duty till night. He continued that Tom Higginson was speaking and that his daughter had shot herself and asked me to phone for a doctor and ambulance. He said he didn't know where she got the revolver.

"I ordered Detectives Watson and Stevenson to go to Higginson's and then phoned for an ambulance.

Q.—Did you know Higginson? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was he excited when speaking on the 'phone? A.—Yes, he spoke as if he had been drinking.

Q.—Had he been drinking? A.—Yes.

That Higginson was coming down the stairs of the home when he entered, was testified by Detective John Watson who related finding the girl lying in slanting position on the floor with blood marks on her throat. Watson asked Dr. T. H. Field, who was in attendance, if the girl was dead but got no reply.

LIPS MOVED

"Then I saw her lips begin to move," continued Detective Watson and I bent down close to hear her say something about getting married tomorrow and asking the doctor to help her.

"Did you see the gun?"

"Yes, about 12 inches from her left hand. It was very large and I wrapped it up in paper to protect any finger prints which may have been on it and later turned it over to H. S. Reynolds at police headquarters. Higginson was very excited and I asked him what he had to drink and he answered 'not a drop.'

"I asked him if the woman was his wife and he told me his wife and daughter were at Sangudo. I asked him how it had happened and he told me that he had gone out to the car and had heard a noise and after getting the car started had gone back into the house where he found the girl upstairs. He kept muttering all the time we were there "how the hell did she find it," and denied that the gun had been loaded. He stated that the shells were in a saucer on the dressing table and that the gun had been on the cupboard floor."

Q.—Did he talk of her marriage? A.—Yes to Steve and a Mounted Policeman. I told him there would probably be police court proceedings, an inquest if the girl died and a charge of attempted suicide against her if she lived and that I wanted a statement from him on the affair. He agreed to make a statement at headquarters and we drove to the station in his car.

READ INTO EVIDENCE

Higginson's statement made at the police station was then read into the records. It contained the information that he was married with one daughter, and the family and himself had been on the farm at Sangudo for three weeks. He went to Alma's house and she suggested that they go to the Higginson home for something to eat. On the way they called at the vendor's store where he bought a 13 ounce bottle of liquor.

At the Higginson home they had a drink apiece after which he went to the garage to start the car which had been idle for three weeks. As he started the machine he heard a noise which was strange and, believed at the time it might have been a back fire. He went back into the house, shouted for Alma and on receiving no reply went upstairs thinking she had gone to the bathroom. At the time he first caught sight of her she was saying, "Tommy, Tommy, where are you?" Higginson's statement continued that he had gone to the 'phone and called police and medical men and had then gone back upstairs where he noticed blood on the floor near the girl's head.

"We had not quarelled and were the best of friends. She had been at my home on several occasions during the absence of my wife," the statement concluded.

Under cross examination of defence counsel, Det. Watson insisted that he had handled the gun in such a manner as to save the fingerprints, picking it up by the ring on the butt and wrapping it in paper.

Juryman Bert Miller in answer to a question as to Higginson's conduct at the wheel during the drive to the police station got the answer that "Higginson drove much better than some of our detectives."

Evidence along the same line was given by Detective Alex. Stevenson, who added the embellishment that when Higginson was asked if Alma was his wife had replied: "No; that's the hell of it."

On a search through the house, Stevenson found two liquor bottles cached in the garage which is attached to the main residence.

NAMES SLAYER

That the dying girl had named "Tommy Higginson" as the man who shot her, was the evidence given by ambulance helper Fred Matten, who was instructed while leaving the house with the victim, to get "All the information he could." It was Dr. Field who gave the order.

Q.—What did she say? A.—She told me about her sister and requested me to phone her. I asked her who had shot her and she told me to lean over closer and she would tell me. I bent over until my ear was a few inches from her mouth to hear her say "Tommy shot me." I asked "Tommy who?" and got the reply "Tommy Higginson." She did not give me her sister's phone number, but her address.

Requested by Hugh C. Macdonald as to details of the conversation in dialogue, the ambulance driver spoke for both himself and the girl.

Another "Tommy-shot-me" statement was read into the records by Detective William McDonald, who rushed up to the Royal Alexandra hospital to see the dying girl at 6.45 p.m., Friday. Dr. Field was in attendance when the policeman arrived and gave permission for the interview.

"I told the woman my name and she seemed to understand me," related the detective. "I asked her what had happened. She told me 'Thomas Higginson shot me with a gun because I would not make love to him.' In view of the statement I arrested Higginson on an attempted murder charge, and gave him the usual warning. He had nothing to say further than the statement he had first given. Later I went with Detective-Sergt. Petheram into the cells and told him the girl had died, raising the charge to murder, but he made no further statement."

REPEATS WORDS

The crown finished with the witness, Hugh C. Macdonald asked that Detective Macdonald give his conversation with the girl in dialogue.

The following is the exchange of words between Macdonald and the girl.

"What happened?"

"Tommy Higginson shot me with a gun."

"What kind of gun?"

"I don't know."

"Why?"

"Because I wouldn't make love to him. I said I wouldn't and he said he would shoot. I told him to shoot and he shot."

"Who else was there?"

"No one else."

Finger-print and hand-writing expert, H. S. Reynolds of the police department could throw little light on the probe, his tests of the gun for finger prints being held up pending the arrival of stronger and finer chemicals than the department possesses at the present time. He denied that Det. Watson's handling of the gun would obliterate prints.

MERE CONJECTURE

"It would be a matter of conjecture", he replied in answer to a question on which way the bullet would go and the gun be thrown by the girl or Higginson after the shooting.

Recalled to the stand later detectives admitted they had not examined the clothes of the accused for bloodstains.

Dr. T. H. Field, first medical man to reach the Higginson home after the shooting told of meeting accused in front of the house and being told by him that "she had been going with a man she doesn't love and had shot herself."

Q.—Did you see the gun? A.—Yes, on her left side.

Q.—Did the girl say anything? Yes, asked if she could sit up, then asked for Steve and her sister. She told me she had been "standing up when Tommy Higginson shot me."

Witness saw powder marks on her neck, he stated under cross examination, the bullet having entered the throat at the front and going out at the back, but severing no large blood vessel.

HAD HAD DRINKS

"The girl had been drinking," witness told the court.

Pathologist of the Royal Alexandra hospital, Dr. E. Morten Hall who conducted the postmortem set the cause of death at the gun shot wounds in the neck and almost complete severence of the spinal cord. The bullet entered the girl's throat and went 9 degrees up and to the left.

Pressed by defence counsel Macdonald to hazard a guess at where the bullet should be found if it followed the same 9 degree upward and to the left course, the witness refused to make a concrete answer.

Much bitter bickering brought the declaration from defence counsel that Morton Hall was "so afraid to say something that would help anybody."

Argument ensued as to how soon paralysis, due to the severance of the spinal cord, would set in.

"Very soon," replied the witness.

"So instantaneous that no movement could be made?" asked Macdonald.

"My opinion is that she would not be able to move, except perhaps her arms."

"How would you expect her to fall?"

"Just down."

"On her face and roll over?"

"No, down."

"How close was the gun fired?"

"Practically point blank."

"Any bruises on her body?"

"None."

EXPERT OPINION

Expert evidence on "intoxication" was given by Dr. J. A. Kelso, the provincial analyst who examined the girl's brain, stomach, spleen and liver following the post mortem.

Alma's stomach contained three quarters of an ounce of alcohol, her brain .26 by weight of alcohol. The point of intoxication is .25 by weight so Alma was on the border line between exhilaration and intoxication.

Dr. C. G. Geggie, medico for the defence, was grilled by the Crown for an unauthorized visit to the morgue where he ordered photographs taken of the girl's body and removed a piece of skin from her wrist.

Dr. Geggie explained he had "been working with Dr. Morten Hall at the post mortem and had been ordered by the defence to visit the morgue."

"Did you get permission of the parents to do this?" he was asked and replied in the negative.

"Are you aware that the body is in charge of the coroner?"

"Yes, but I thought it had been released."

"Well, it hadn't," remarked Coroner Braithwaite.

Admitting he had received no permission from the authorities for his action at the morgue on Monday night last, Dr. Geggie made no reply to a question by the crown counsel that he (Dr. Geggie) "had not been working with Dr. Morton Hall, but for the defence."

"What did you find?" the court wanted to know.

"Two spots were on her wrists. They might have been powder burns, but I turned the skin over to Dr. Kelso and have received no report."

"You are working for the defence?"

"Yes."

EDITOR CALLED

W. A. de Graves, managing editor of the Edmonton Bulletin, was next called to the stand and questioned about an exclusive story that appeared in the paper on Wednesday which stated that police were to probe a report that the girl had died after a tube through which she was breathing had been removed from her neck in order that another one could be replaced.

"Did you see the story?" the managing editor was asked.

"Yes."

"Who wrote it?"

"Several of the reporters could have written it."

"Didn't you have one man to cover the case?"

"They all brought in information."

"Did you write the headlines?"

"No."

"Who did?"

"Several men on the desk could have written them."

"Who?"

"You didn't write the headlines of the story?"

"No."

"And you don't know who did?"

"No," came the reply and Mr. deGraves stepped down from the stand.

Dick Jackson, police reporter for The Bulletin, was called next and after a series of preliminary questions was pinned down to the statement that he had "written something like the story."

"As it is here," he was asked.

STORY READ

The story in question was read paragraph by paragraph and the reporter admitted that he had written "most of it."

"The authoritative source that is quoted as being good enough to warrant police to make an investigation, who was that authority?" he was asked.

After some hesitation Jackson replied that "the information was given him in confidence and that he felt obliged to treat it as such."

"Are you sure it wasn't just imagination, and that this answer is only an easy way out for you?"

Jackson again stated he got the story from a source he considered reliable and authoritative.

"You believed the story true?"

"Yes."

"Tell us who was the authority and we will call him for questioning."

"I can't."

"You won't?"

"I'm sorry, no. It was given in confidence."

Court was then adjourned to Saturday morning at 10 a.m. with the jury paying a visit to the Higginson home to be shown the spot where detectives recovered the bullet.

HEPBURN IS FEARLESS ON HIS BIG JOB

fourth concession road back of St. Thomas in Elgin County.

"Mitch" was secretary of the local United Farmer group for a number of years and acquired his attitude towards public affairs from the farm standpoint.

A FALSE IMPRESSION

The man who swept the deeply entrenched Conservative party out of power in Ontario last June is a policital personality of great potency. When I set out on this survey I decided to find out more about him. Filtered and attenuated press reports of his campaign speeches conveyed an impression of him to British Columbia readers that could not be correct.

No wise-cracking clown could become leader of his party and, after four years under the spotlight, win a great election.

One knew there must be something more to him than that. There is. I came, I saw, and I was conquered.

RECALLS JOHN OLIVER

"Mitch" Hepburn is a happy combination of the late "Honest John" Oliver, former premier of British Columbia, and Hon. Charles Dunning, former premier of Saskatchewan and former dominion finance minister.

Like Oliver, he has his feet on the ground. He shares Oliver's gift for reducing a complicated public problem down to some homely, rural metaphor that the common man can understand. He loves a good broad agricultural witticism. Hence the reputation for "clowning."

He has Dunning's energy and charm. He moves like the wind. His quick intelligence fairly snaps. His effervescent boyishness radiates good cheer and confidence. To be near him is to be captivated.

The political manager who sent him out on that man-killing 30-day tour with its 90 speeches knew his man. The greater the number of people who were brought under the spell of this radiant personality, the greater the number of Liberal votes.

At work or at play, he is a standout in any group. You feel that here is a young man who is going places and that it would be a treat to go along with him. He is a leader.

HAS STRONG PRINCIPLES

He has everything. Behind the cordial, magnetic smile there are a mind and a conscience at work. Hepburn has definite ideals and principles and unlimited courage to back them up.

"Here is in truth "the happy warrior."

Mitchell Hepburn is no accident. He told the people of Ontario that he would reduce the cost of government. Every day that I was in the east the Toronto papers came out with new lists of public officials dismissed, whole departments abolished, salaries reduced.

Some thought he was going too far. Conservatives said it was a vicious manifestation of the spoils system.

A young farmer, intensely skeptical of parties and party politicians analyzed the situation for me.

'This is no partisan clean-up to make jobs. Hepburn has pledged himself to reduce the cost of government. He has got to show results.

"If this were simply a dodge to make jobs for a lot of party heelers he'd have nothing to show for it. He wants to show a big saving in the budget. I am sure he is in earnest about it."

BOUND TO MAKE MISTAKES

In many quarters I found criticism of particular changes Hepburn hes made. Usually this was expressed somewhat as follows:

"He is wrong in that particular, but he is right in the main. The clean-up had to come. In so big a job a man is bound to make some mistake."

Finally, there were the two by-elections in Owen Sound and Wellington County. The vote of the people was more strongly in favor of the Liberals than before the Hepburn broom went into action.

These men on the back concessions know that Hepburn is their friend, that he has undertaken a hard and ungracious task, but that his purpose is to bring down their taxes.

They are for him.

HORSE AND BUGGY DAYS ENDED

The Premier gave me two examples of why the clean-up was necessary.

In one department he found an old fellow-craftsman of my own who had been engaged at a nice salary three years ago to write some kind of report. The first page of the report had yet to be written when Hepburn took office. It never will be written now.

He dismissed the whole staff of 56 district health officers.

"We don't need them any more. The municipalities have their own health officers. In case of an epidemic requiring Government assistance the telephone and a motor car can bring all that is needed to any part of the province in two or three hours.

"We have got past the horse and buggy days, but we haven't taken advantage of the economies that rapid communication and rapid transport now permit."

TOO MUCH DUPLICATION

He instanced his own county. It has half a dozen towns and seven townships, each with its own assessor, clerk, solicitor, health officer and so on.

"Yet there is not a point in Elgin County that can't be reached from St. Thomas in 55 minutes. This is all unnecessary duplication."

A reform that he is likely to tackle—he has not made up his mind yet, he said—is the combining of whole groups of municipalities.

"There'll be a lot of kicking," he recognized, "but if it is the right thing to do that will have to be our satisfaction."

He estimated that by the time he was through with the departmental organization he would have reduced the government overhead by close to 50 per cent.

HE'S AFTER INTEREST RATES

But he is not picking only on the unfortunate civil servants. He has gone after the banks on the question of interest and only a few days ago translated over $40,000,000 of public debt from a 5 per cent basis to less than 3 per cent.

A bolder stroke still was his announced decision to use arbitrary authority reducing the rates on the debt of the bankrupt municipalities. Bondholders will be given the chance to agree to a reasonable compromise. If they fail the rates will be cut by law.

Attorney-General Arthur Roebuck has ruled that the municipal commissions that regulate the affairs of the defaulted municipalities have the power and Premier Hepburn has announced that it will be exercised.

BELIEVES IN MONETARY REFORM

As with most public men, he recognizes unemployment as the greatest problem in Canada. But he holds that it is a Federal problem because the fundamental causes and cures lie within the realm of federal jurisdiction. The two remedies he would apply are:

1. Trade expansion.
2. Monetary reform.

As Prime Minister of Ontario he is devoting himself to matters that the provincial government can deal with. As a citizen of Canada he will leave no stone unturned to win public support for the federal reforms without which no provincial government can do its job satisfactorily.

On the subject of monetary reform he and Capt. Ian Mackenzie have sat up many a night comparing their views, studying and working out methods of attack. He and Mackenzie are fast friends and on the big problems they see alike, he told me.

INFLUENCE FEDERAL VOTING

The man who has done these things and is doing these things is going to have a lot to say in the five Dominion by-elections that take place in Ontario on Sept. 24. The voice of this chap from the back concession will be listened to, as it was listened to at Owen Sound and in Wellington.

He will be a big factor in the general election that is to follow.

Time alone will show whether the man who has this radiant, charming personality, who has the energy and the courage to tackle a big job fearlessly, has also the long-range vision and the capacity to govern a great province for a period of years.

He has surrounded himself with a cabinet that was described to me by one of the most responsible veteran business men of Toronto as the ablest Ontario has ever had. If, with their help, he stands up to the test of time, Mitchell Hepburn will go farther and higher in the public service even than Premier of Ontario.

"I Can Take It"—Then Death Hits

FLORENCE, Ariz., Sept. 1.—Louis Sprague Douglas died in Arizona's lethal gas chamber Friday for the murder of Ralph Hart, aged Yuma prospector.

"I can take it," Douglas said as he smiled and stood inside the doors of the lethal box while officers bound his arms to his sides and fastened him to a chair in the centre of the chamber.

Eight and one quarter minutes after poison pellets were dropped into acid in a bowl placed at his feet physicians pronounced life extinct.

LOST PROFESSOR SOUGHT AT LINE OVER TWO WEEKS

International Search For Missing Educationist Started as Over Two Weeks Passes.

GLACIER NATIONAL PARK, Mont., Sept. 1.—Aid of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and of the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation Friday was enlisted by Glacier National Park authorities in an effort to find Dr. P. F. Lumley, 27, Ohio educationist, unreported since he left Goathaunt camp, near the international border, Aug. 13.

Park officials were informed from an undisclosed source that Lumley had spoken of walking around the shore of Waterton Lake, near the Canadian line. That area was being searched.

A possibility the young scientist, an educational research associate at Ohio State University where his father is professor of sociology, might have gone to Banff, Alta., faded Friday when it was learned his mother had returned to her home in Cleveland. A postcard from her at Banff, found in her son's luggage at a park hotel, suggested he "ought not to miss this." The father said the clue was "of not much value."

Search for Lumley was started when the young man's luggage was unclaimed after several days.

In the public schools the Central School staff will be Principal J. Welsh, Clare Gaskell, Mrs. A. Holt, Mrs. V. S. Allen, Miss M. Peden, Miss Nancy Stephenson, Miss Ena Paul, Miss Isabel Murray and Miss Eleanor McMurtry. In the North Red Deer school, Miss Flo Gaetz will be the teacher. Mrs. W. Section Of Road Sinks From Sight

ST. WENDEL, Wis., Sept. 1 — A second of road between Centerville and Meeme running through a gumbo bog two miles west of here, which has settled about two feet yearly, suddenly sank from sight recently beneath fourteen feet of water and sludge. The weight of many tons of gravel dumped on yearly to maintain its level heaved a grove of elm and ash trees nearby up several feet when the road disappeared.

SOVIET LEAGUE ENTRY NOT TO AFFECT CANADA

BENNETT HATRED FOR RUSSIA MAY FADE AT GENEVA

No Loosening of Trade Barriers Expected if U.S.S.R. Does Join Geneva Body, Ottawa Says.

By THOS. WAYLING

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

OTTAWA, Sept. 1—The entry of Russia into the League of Nations will not change the trade situation between the Dominion and the Soviet unless a more favorable opinion of Russia changes the mind of the present Premier of Canada. So opinion in Ottawa reacts to the report that Russia might enter the League to get trading advantages with Canada.

There is no present bar on trade with Russia and Canada save the embargoes on five Russia products entering Canada; coal, lumber, pulpwood, asbestos and dressed furs. Oil is not on the embargo but the one experience of Russia shipping oil to Canada resulted in a strong hint from Ottawa that it was not to be repealed. Russian imports are under the fear of an embargo more than an actual embargo.

The expectation that were Russia to enter the League the channels of trade with Canada automatically be cleared is not shared in Ottawa. Immediately Mr. Bennett came into power he had passed in the special session of 1930 an amendment to the customs act authorizing the gover-in-council "to prohibit the importation into Canada of any goods exported directly or indirectly from any country not a contracting party to the Treaty of Versailles."

AIMED DIRECTLY

This clause was aimed directly at Russia, though Turkey and other countries were not contracting parties. This was proven by the passage soon after of an order in council putting an embargo on the import from Russia of the goods named.

It is pointed out now that the economic situation in Russia has not changed in respect to Mr. Bennett's allegations, and that Russia's entry into the League would not change that situation.

All that would be needed to clear the channels of trade with Russia so far as actual barriers are concerned is the rescinding of the order-in-council. This would entail the rescinding of Mr. Bennett's obsession against Russia, which broke out again at the Imperial Conference of 1932 and almost wrecked the conference.

CONTACT MAY HELP

The only hope of trade experts of a betterment in the Canada-Russia trade situation is that Mr. Bennett at the League will come into contact with the Russia delegates, and with British delegates interested in friendly relations of the Empire with other countries of the world, including Russia. Russia is understood to be willing to increase her friendly relations with Canada, but Mr. Bennett so far has been against it. When the Russian minister visited Washington some time ago it was known that he would have been willing to come to Ottawa and discuss matters with Mr. Bennett, but received no encouragement. The British delegates to the League would further any move to make Mr. Bennett friendly to Russia and remove his obsession, which has caused considerable difficulty with respect to Anglo-Russian trade relations. At the Imperial Conference and afterwards, Mr. Bennett persistently interfered, and from time to time gave Hon. Howard Ferguson such instructions to press the British government that Mr. Ferguson is currently reported in the capital to tell Mr. Bennett to stop interfering. Mr. Bennett demanded that Britain stop taking Russian lumber.

So far as is known in Ottawa, Mr. Bennett's state of mind towards Russia is still unchanged, and only his conversion from his anti-Russianism can charge the trade situation; that and a general election which would put it out of his power to further interfere.

The entry of a Liberal government to power in Ottawa is considered as more likely to change the Canada-Russian trade situation than Russia's entry into the League while Mr. Bennett still has power to bar the trade.

Pigeons' Pickin's Chisel Chickens; Council Cackles

LEDUC, Sept. 1. — Albert Larson's chicken's will continue to be robbed by his neighbor Block's chiselling pigeons, it seems, because even the town council can't do anything about it.

At a recent council meeting Mr. Larson lodged a complaint that the pigeons were making regular landings in his chicken yard in squadron formation, just at feeding time. But no action was taken because the town had no bylaw to cover the alleged offence.

Mr. Larson thinks they should pass a law or something.

N.Y. CENTRAL TRAINS CRASH, ONE FATALITY

Forty Injured as Rear-end Collision Piles up Coaches

EEKSKILL, N.Y., Sept. 1.—A collision of two New York Central passenger trains brought death to one man and injury to two score persons late last night. Six persons were taken to hospitals.

The crash occurred at Crugers Station, five miles south of here, when a New York-to-Montreal express train struck the rear end of a Lake Placid bound holiday special which was standing in the station. The engineer of the Montreal train said he was going about 10 miles an hour at the time.

The dead man was James J. Tracy, 32, of Brooklyn, N.Y., brakeman on the Lake Placid train.

CEMETERY IN PARIS IS FOR CANINES ONLY

Weeping willows and stately cypress trees along tranquil pathways lined with benches of marble fitted with gold plates in memory of this or that pup. All this on an idyllic, breeze-fanned island in the Seine, from where you can see the heat-waves of a summer afternoon shimmering on the endless rows of concrete, airless slum tenements of Asnieres and Clichy, suburbs of Paris where infant mortality hovers between 65 and 72 per cent. ever since vital statistics came to be compiled.

TUBERCULOSIS IN PARIS

There are twenty-five cemeteries in Paris, some famous ones such as Pere Lachaise, Monparnasse and Montmartre. The tombstones in these immense graveyards present a complete course in the history and the spiritual life of France of the last five or six centuries. But this city of dead dogs on the island has a note all its own. The place is called the "Isle des Ravageurs." Until half a century ago it was inhabited by ravageurs, that is people who fished up corpses that floated down the Seine and stripped them of their clothes and valuables which they sold on Sunday morning at the Marche des Puces (the Flea-Market). The Flea Market still exists, but the ravageurs have vanished, along with the apaches and the garrotters.

I always knew this dog cemetery existed. But I had never gone there. I don't like cemeteries. Morbid Dostoievsky went to cemeteries to overhear the conversations of the dead and subsequently write it down in lugubrious dialogue. My ears are not so sensitively attuned. I hear nothing in such places but the silence of the tombs. And then, in order to get this canine necropolis you must traverse either Asnieres or Clichy. If ever you do go that way you'll wonder with me why Paris is called "gay." Asnieres and Clichy have the highest percentage of any town in the world for tuberculosis. That frightful disease meets you in the streets at every step, stops you to ask for a penny or stares at you with deep burning eyes from behind a lone flower-pot in some open window.

MONEY FOR DOG FUNERALS

The benches in the dog cemetery are put up "for meditation." It says so on the gold plates, which you may inspect under the watchful eye of private policemen. What is one to meditate on after coming through Clichy on a sweltering hot day? I know what I was thinking: Some day all this godless business, this cramming together of human beings in these steaming ovens will have to stop. There is always money, and at a moment's notice, for armaments and battleships, but it takes centuries to clean up one slum district. Why?

To be treated like a dog is a popular saying. I saw some dog funerals this afternoon that make this saying ridiculous. Six uniformed attendants carried a tiny coffin with a deference as if it contained the imperial crown of Muscovy. Slowly, on an automatic lowering machine, it disappeared into the earth. Heaps of flowers were thrown in the open grave. The mourners wept. They were two old ladies. But it's not only elderly spinsters who want to assure their darlings a human fate after death, so to speak. I saw the tombs where dogs were buried that had belonged to Henri Bataille, to Courteline, to Abel Faivre, to Marshal Foch. I saw the grave of Henri de Rochefort's cat. The grave of Rejane's canary bird and the grave of a race-horse namer Krumir which died, so the epitaph informed me, of worry over losing a race.

KILLED BY MAN HE SAVED

No, not only old ladies have a greater regard for beasts than men. Frederick II, who was a great soldier, but also a great despiser of men, loved his dogs so well that he had them embalmed and entombed in the park of Sans-Souci. Robespierre had planned a funeral for his bull-dog Brount, when the axe of the guillotine intervened. Brount died two days before his master. The present ruler of the German people pompously committed one of his shepherds to earth on his Bavarian estate the other day. But the body of Dr. Klausner was cremated. Dead men tell no tales and an urnful of ashes gave no evidence of where the bullets struck.

The first grave I saw was that of the famous St. Bernard, "Barry," who saved forty travellers from a snowy death in the Swiss mountains. The forty-first man he saved shot him by mistake after the dog had brought him back to life. Barry's statue is there. Fine. On one grave I saw a sculptor busy installing a likeness in marble of a pug-dog.

"True to life, isn't he?" the artist asked me with obvious self-satisfaction.

"Yes," I said, "except that he doesn't bark!"

A BUSINESS VENTURE

The dog-cemetery of Paris, the only one in the world, I think certainly the biggest, was not started by any dog-lovers. It was started as a business venture by two Polish immigrants who settled in Paris two hundred years ago. A speculation on human sentimentality, to be exact. The heirs of those two Poles are among the richest people in this town today. In other words the business flourished.

Every grave has an epitaph. Many have a photo in a glass-case slowing the buried canine in better days. Among the names I noticed were Athos, Zezette, Bouboulo, Cho-Cho, Diane, Didi, Farcette, Folette, Medor, Tic, Tac, Zizi, Toby, Whisky, Pioupiou and Petit Voyou. There were inscriptions in English, in Spanish, in Dutch, in German and in languages unknown to me even by sight.

Some inscriptions are exaggerated to the point of ridicule. One reads: "Dors, mon cher petit Mexik. Mon ame est avec toi." ("Sleep, dear little Mexik. My soul is with you.) Or this one: "What epitaph could express my broken heart." "Petit chou, si aimante et tant aimee, fais dodo, tu ne seras jamais oubliee ni remplacee." (Little darling cabbage so lovely and so deeply loved, go sleepy-sleep, you will never be forgotten nor replaced.)

A HEAVEN FOR DOGS

Heinrich Heine tells how Daning missionaries who tried to convert the Greenlanders were asked whether there were any seals in the Christian heaven. When the Greenlanders were given a negative reply, they refused to embrace Christianity, saying that life without seals wasn't worth while. In this dog cemetery I found one epitaph which holds out hope, however. It reads: "Moi, je crois, que dans le Peut-Etre, Dans l'Ailleurs' que nous esperons, Les bons chiens attendent leur maitre, Et que nous nous retrouverons." (I believe that in the great Maybe, in that hereafter for which we hope, good dogs wait for their masters and that we will see each other again.)

If that's true, I hope for the dogs' sake that they won't have to be kept on the leash, as in French parks or wear a muzzle on the hottest days of the year.

Some epitaphs say more about the master than about the dog. This one for instance: "You were a better friend than humans." Or this bitter cry: "Nobody understood me but you." "Or this yet: "You were the companion of my solitude and misery!" Still that misery could not have been of a material kind. For a grave costs 10,000 francs or $665 and the tombstone on that particular grave was easily worth double that amount. The upkeep is 500 francs a year, $35.

I caught the seven o'clock pont back to Clichy just after the factories had closed. Masses of men and women were streaming along the quays. There were tired and pale faces at every window in the tenement houses. The night announced itself sultry. Under the Seine bridges fires were burning. The homeless clochards were getting ready for the evening meal. Others were asleep already stretched out on the cobblestones.

MASS BUYING PROBERS SET FOR NEW START

By THOS. WAYLING

Special to The Bulletin

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 1.—The Mass Buying Brain Trust is clearing the decks of the Stevens Royal Commission for action. The evidence obtained by the special investigators is being studied and assimilated against the meeting of the commission three weeks hence.

L. B. Pierson, of external affairs, is secretary of the commission and J. M. Boyer, of the Commercial Intelligence Branch of Mr. Stevens' own department, is assistant. A number of technical experts have been borrowed from various departments, and in addition Prof. B. W. Bladen, of Toronto University, Prof. C. A. Curtis of Queens and W. J. Couper, formerly of British Columbia University.

AIR DISPLAY FINDS PARIS OPEN TO RAID

PARIS, Sept. 1. — "Enemy" air raiders last night had "laid waste" France's proud capital and, theoretically, escaped almost unscathed.

Sweeping down suddenly out of leaden, foggy skies, the 120 fast bombers of the "Red" attacking fleet "invading" Paris from across an imaginary frontier paralleling the German border demonstrated adequately the city's vulnerability to an enemy air attack.

WOMEN'S BIG SWIM STARTS

LAKE FRONT, TORONTO, Sept. 1. — Twenty-two girl swimmers plunged into Lake Ontario's 62 degrees water at 2:18 o'clock this afternoon in the Canadian National Exhibition's 5-mile swim for prizes totalling $4,000. It was raining steadily as they got away.

Despite the downpour thousands were lined along the waterfront to see the women crawl their best for the first prize money of $2,000 and the other $2,000 to be split up among the next five. The girls were started from the west end of the course, the first time this had been done in exhibition swims, and will finish up at the same spot after swimming east half a mile and returning five times.

Soviet Membership in the League Believed Likely to Relieve Tension Between Moscow - Tokyo.

By JOSEPH E. SHARKEY

GENEVA, Sept. 1—League of Nations officials here last night credited Great Britain's support of Russian membership to her apprehension over political tension in the Far East.

(London despatches Friday quoted British sources as saying the Far Eastern situation had nothing to do with British advocacy of Moscow's entry into the league.)

While league sources believed the British economic delegation sent to Manchukuo in an effort to find new markets for British products might conceivably bring about an economic rapprochement with Japan, they saw no indication the two island nations desire to renew their alliance.

The British attitude was represented here to be that Russian membership in the league would be likely to ease tension caused by recent friction between Tokyo and Moscow.

Russia was pictured as apprehensive both as to Japan and Germany.

League officials feared new arrangements might be made between Russia and Germany (the latter, like Japan, a bolter from the league's ranks), despite the immense chasm between Nazi-ism and Communism.

No Fears For Old Friend

LONDON, Sept. 1.—Great Britain does not fear her new advocacy of Russian membership in the League of Nations will endanger her traditional friendship with Japan.

A well qualified interpreter of the government's policies said last night the tri-power drive for the Soviet's admission to the League launched by Great Britain, France and Italy "has nothing to do with the Far Eastern situation."

The alternative facing Europe, this source asserted, was in alliance between France and Russia. Great Britain opposed this, he said, not only because of her own dominant position but because she was convinced it would menace the peace of Europe.

Tories Speak At Belvedere

BELVEDERE, Sept. 1.—Three cabinet ministers to control the destinies of the province, a reduced legislative assembly, refunding national, provincial and municipal debts and a substantial reduction in the cost of government were among the highlights of a speech delivered by D. M. Duggan, M.L.A., provincial Conservative leader, at a mass meeting held here recently. Donald Ramsey and Dr. W. A. Atkinson, M.L.A., Edmonton, also spoke. Reene Brant, vice-president of the league, occupied the chair.

FIERY H. LONG SHOOTS PATH TO OWN HOUSE

Newsmen Seized by Armed Guards—Inquiry to Open at Once

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 1—Sweeping into the city with armed troops who used violence to clear a path, Senator Huey P. Long set out last night under a proclamation of martial law to investigate his political enemies—the heads of the municipal government.

An automobile cavalcade with shrieking sirens brought the Senator from Baton Rouge, where Governor O. K. Allen had issued an order calling the militia into active service to protect the legislative investigating committee.

Through the streets the cars sped. They roared along Audubon boulevard, where Long—the state's political dictator—has a palatial residence.

SEE NEWSMEN

In front of the house the soldiers saw Frank Allen, night city editor of the New Orleans Times-Picayune, and E. E. Agnelly, a photographer for the paper.

With drawn guns the troops charged the two men. They grabbed Agnelly's camera, tore away some of his clothes, and threw him into a truck.

Other troops seized Allen. In 15 minutes they freed him with a warning for all newspapermen to "keep clear."

CROWDS GATHER

Crowds of citizens gathered on street corners. The entire city was in a state of excitement. More national guardsmen, some reports said, were to be brought here from other communities.

Senator Long declared he would have Mayor Walmsley out of office in 30 days. There were enough witnesses, he said, to convict the whole city administration of misconduct in office because of alleged associations with the underworld.

PEACE RIVER HARVESTING RECORD CROP

the damage will not be felt since much of the wheat in that area was either cut or ripe. But in the territory eastward, northeast and north and west of this city, indications are of damage to wheat and other grains.

Wheat will lose from one to two grades in quality as well as reducing the quantity. Oats and barley also have suffered.

Throughout the Lethbridge division of the C.P.R. a fairly substantial volume of wheat is being produced and some surprisingly large individual yields are reported from this territory. This applies across the southern part of the province from Cardston to Lethbridge and Medicine Hat and south to the border. There are some good crops along the western side of the province to Calgary.

TOTAL YIELDS LOW

The south-eastern part of the province from Stettler to Coronation, south to the South Saskatchewan and east from Drumheller, suffered failure of crops and the total yield of both grains and feed will be low.

Across the central part of the province from Ponoka to Olds and from the mountains eastward, the season has been unusually dry and the yield will be sub-normal. Feed also will be short in this area.

In the north-central and northern areas of the province all crops have given promise of heavy yield, but the total returns may be reduced according to the damage done by the frost.

The Peace River areas, however, are enjoying a big year and are rushing to the conclusion of harvesting of what gives promise of being a record breaking crop of all grains.

AMPLE FEED SUPPLIES

Feed supplies are ample in the province for requirements. The south-western districts have produced considerable long feed this year and there are good crops of alfalfa coming from the irrigated districts.

In the northern areas from Wetaskiwin north there is an abundant supply of feed of all kinds, one result of frost being to reduce grain crops in some areas to the status of feed.

FAMILY PENSION PROVIDED UNDER R.C.M.P. SCHEME

By THOS. WAYLING

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

OTTAWA, Sept. 1.—The families of N.C.O.'s and men of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police are to be protected by pensions contributed by the men themselves during their term of service.

Proclamation will be made Saturday of the amendment made last session to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act, putting its provisions into force on Oct. 1.

At present R.C.M.P. N.C.O.'s and officers get pensions for long service and on retirement, but the new plan provides annuities for their wives and children. The men will contribute five per cent. of their pay to a fund for this purpose. Under present conditions there is no provision for the wife and family when a man leaves the force.

the Liberal party in the general election. They consider it would be a poor time to change horses when the stream is being crossed.

"Showing the white feather in front of the federal by-elections" is the Liberal reaction in the capital to the reports.

It was semi-officially stated that the National Liberal Federation, the National Liberal Women's Federation and the Twentieth Century Clubs would not consider union government, nor can any Liberal of standing be found who would approve it.

FINANCIAL INTERESTS SEEN

The financial crowd of St. James street and the railway interests of Montreal are considered to be behind repeated revivals of the union government project. Knowing Mr. Mackenzie King's antagonism to any such project, all the proposals have included his elimination as leader of the Liberal party. Two years ago the plan was evolved to supplant him by Premier Taschereau. Hon Ernest Lapointe was approached indirectly and repudiated the suggestion that he take over the leadership and become another Laurier. His repudiation was in forceful language.

Premier Taschereau also would have nothing to do with any such scheme as union government.

Now with certain defeat facing Mr. Bennett, the conspirators are said to have again made indirect approaches and sounded him out. The present Conservative leader is now believed to be more favorable, as union government would offer him the opportunity to retire gracefully from Canadian politics and hie to London and the peerage.

CROWN GRILLS REPORTER IN DEATH PROBE

for the newspapers and you got none from him? A.—No, not from him.

Q.—Now about this interne taking the tube out of the girl's throat, you got that at the hospital, didn't you? A.—I can't tell you. Mr. McClung as I said before, I got the information from what is a reliable, authoritative and responsible source that has proved correct in the past. I wrote the story in good faith, believing it to be true. I don't yet know that it is not true.

Q.—Yesterday you said you thought it to be untrue? A.—No, I said that in the light of Dr. Morton Hall's evidence on the cause of the girl's death it did not appear material. But if the jury is worried about that angle I suggest that you call hospital authorities to the witness stand.

Q—Did you get your information at the Royal Alexandra hospital? A.—I can't tell you.

RELIABLE SOURCE

Q. — You were imagining it, weren't you? A.—No, I said that the information came from a reliable and authoritative source.

The witness then stepped from the stand.

Provincial analyst, Dr. J. A. Kelso was recalled and questioned on the results of his findings following examination of pieces of skin from the girl's wrist turned over to him by Dr. C. G. Geggie.

"There was no evidence of powder burns or smoke stains," testified witness.

"Bruises?"

"None. There was a little grease under the hair close to the skin. Two spots of grease but no bruises."

The jury was shown a gun, which, according to H. S. Reynolds was similar to the one which figured in the case.

Roy Armstrong, brother of the slain girl testified that she was unfamiliar with firearms, in fact she was scared of them.

"Were there any weapons around your home?" asked Crown counsel.

"Only a .22 rifle."

James Ogilvie, defence counsel in cross examining received the information that in the past three years Alma had spent half her time at home.

NO OTHER WEAPONS

"Were there any other weapons to the .22 around the house?"

"No."

"There might have been?"

"I am quite sure there wasn't."

"You must remember they were not dying declarations, the girl was not told that she had no hope of life," cautioned the coroner.

"You must decide in whose hands the gun was at the time of the shooting."

"I feel it my duty to say that newspapers and newspapermen have no right to withhold information or treat the matter as they have done.

"I cannot understand why a doctor without authorization tampered with the deceased's body and that others have hampered police by disclosing information before the authorities were aware of it. When a post mortem is being conducted it is not a public affair and only the pathologist and officer of the crown should be present.

PENALIZING SERVICE

M. J. Coldwell, leader of the C.C.F. party in Saskatchewan, who happens to be the principal of a Regina public school, has been notified by the School Board of that city that he must either resign his leadership of the C.C.F. party or resign his job as school principal.

The above isn't an item from "Forty Years Ago." It took place this week in western Canada. Principal Coldwell is given until Sept. 8 to decide which he will relinquish—his politics or his profession.

It wasn't that Mr. Coldwell had been neglecting his school work. For several years past he has served as a city alderman without objection. Usually on election day he was ahead of his colleagues in the voting. He was a party candidate in the Regina constituency in the recent general election without any accusation that his work as a school principal suffered.

Actually, Mr. Coldwell was taking steps to see that his school couldn't possibly suffer from his political activities. He asked for leave of absence without pay for one year, to devote himself exclusively to propaganda and organization of the C.C.F. party in Saskatchewan. It was this request which, after much argument behind closed doors, finally led to the public ultimatum—'quit as party leader or quit as principal.'

The action of the school trustees, while it has won approval in certain political quarters, seems indefensible from the larger aspect of national good and of public liberty.

As a school principal Mr. Coldwell has to instruct his pupils that public service is the highest duty of the individual. He must give courses in civics to instruct pupils in the science of government and arouse their interest in public affairs. Yet when he answers the call to lay his own trained and educated abilities on the altar of public service, the School Board threatens to end his school career.

It is not that school principals are scarce at the present time, and that a trained substitute could not be obtained for Mr. Coldwell during the year he asks leave. If he had asked leave to travel abroad for a year there is no question but that his request would have been granted. It narrows down to penalizing a particularly able and promising public servant because he feels the urge to public service.

That Mr. Coldwell's political faith is not the political faith of the majority of the Regina School Board—or of The Bulletin for that matter—should not be an element in the refusal of his request. Heaven knows that with trade stagnant, agriculture smitten, money restricted, credit starved and thousands of able men doomed to incarceration in celibate work camps at 20 cents a day wages (for days worked), there is a call to the ablest minds in our midst, irrespective of party, sex, race or station, to give the best that is in them to a solution of our present difficulties.

Attempts by Conservative elements in Alberta to penalize a professor of the provincial university because of his valued spare time service to the community, was effectively scotched a year ago. It is to be hoped that public opinion in the city of Regina will deter the Regina School Board from carrying into effect its mediaeval mandate against allowing its employees to propagate their sincere personal opinions in the political arena.

UP TO OTTAWA

Congress is giving President Roosevelt power to negotiate reciprocal trade treaties with other countries, on practically what terms he may see fit to accept. No former President was armed with such sweeping control over the commercial policy of the nation. The treaties will not require ratification by Congress. They will come into effect when Mr. Roosevelt so orders.

The significance is plain. Congress does not hope to achieve prosperity by purely domestic measures. It is out to secure a revival of external trade as well. It plans to stimulate exports by relaxing the tariff against imports, thus allowing foreign buyers to pay for United States goods with heir own products.

This is a complete reversal of the traditional trade policy of the United States. It is comparable only to the swing of "free trade" Britain to a protective tariff. It is revolutionary in character and will be far-reaching in results. It marks the end of commercial exclusion and the re-entry of the United States as an aggressive competitor for world trade.

How Canada will fare depends upon how our Government and parliament meet the new situation. If Ottawa negotiates a treaty with Washington, Canada will benefit to the extent that Canadian exports to the United States are increased. But Canada will suffer to the extent that United States competition is intensified in the over-sea markets where we sell our surplus products—unless our Government adopts a parallel policy and offers the foreign buyer equally favorable entry into the Canadian market.

The new departure at Washington makes Canada's present position untenable. Since the United States is to exchange products with our customers abroad, we shall have to do the same or lose the customers.

MONEY SETS A LIMIT

The Governments of Great Britain and the United States have suspended until fall the "conversations" they have been holding in regard to naval matters. The suspension was the result of a request from Japan. Tokio explains that the request for a suspension was made because the Japanese Government has been unable to decide "fundamental questions regarding naval treaties"—particularly the treaty which expires next year, no doubt.

Which may be taken to mean the Japanese statesmen have read and interpreted the announcement made at Washington that the United States will build two new battle-ships if the powers do not agree upon a navy-limiting arrangement within the year. The "fundamental question" raised by that announcement is whether Japan had better consent to an agreement or undertake to out-build the United States.

Tokio's request for a suspension of the conversations in London rather suggests that the Japanese Government is not ambitious to try to match dollars against dollars with the Government of the United States in a contest of financial endurance.

Forty Years Ago

Among the passengers arriving on the H.B. Co. steamer Athabasca at the Landing on Saturday were Mrs. Scott, wife of the manager of the H.B. store at Providence, and children, Mrs. Christie, wife of the accountant of the company for the Mackenzie river district; Mr. Hodgins of Ft. Rae; Mrs. Emma Shaw Colcleugh, correspondent of the Boston Transcript, and Bishop Girouard of Providence.

J. Carlton left yesterday for the north, taking a large trading outfit. Mr. Carlton is a gold prospector rather than a trader, and intends to explore to the Arctic circle, prospecting along the streams.

A boy mounting a cayuse in front of J. Cameron's store yesterday used a whip to start it. This startled H. Long's team which was standing near the crossing and they were off. The team ran into Mr. Cameron's horse, standing in front of the store, which ran away, dragging the upturned rig with it. Mr. Long's team ran into H. Edmiston's team, standing in front of J. Gibbons, causing it to run away. Long's team jumped a four-foot fence into Larue and Picard's yard and a number of horses there promptly scampered off. The runaways were all rounded up finally, with no serious damage done.

Bishop Girouard was a visitor in town Monday. His stay was very short as he hastened back to the Landing to catch the Athabasca on the return trip down stream. He came in for parts for a steamer the mission is building to run on the northern lakes and rivers.

Poems That Live

MY PRAYER

Great God, I ask thee for no meaner pelf
Than that I may not disappoint myself;
That in my action I may soar as high
As I can now discern with this clear eye.

And next in value, which thy kindness lends,
That I may greatly disappoint my friends,
Howe'er they think or hope that it may be,
They may not dream how thou'st distinguished me.

That my weak hand may equal my firm faith,
And my life practice more than my tongue saith;
That my low conduct may not show,
Nor my relenting lines,
That I thy purpose did not know,
Or overrated thy designs.

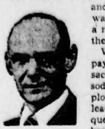
The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

Still the mystery grows as to why Hon. H. H. Stevens thrust himself into the pose of a Savonarola by denunciations of modern buccaneering and demands to purge his party of all taint, only to recede from the limelight and hide himself under a cloud of pious moralizings and beatitudes when the public was ready to acclaim him as a modern Moses come to lead the people out of bondage.



J. S. Cowper

Was it a case of fearing to pay the price and risk the sacrifice? Or was it an episode in a carefully prepared plot between himself and his leader? These are the two questions many people have been asking. They seem to think the explanation lies in one answer or the other. They can't see any other explanation to fit the facts. Yet I think neither is right. The explanation lies elsewhere.

* * *

You know the poem about "the primrose by the river brim" that was everything from a party emblem to a specimen of the Genus Primula vulgaris to the half dozen different men who saw it. All the people I've heard discussing the problem of the Stevens episode overlook the most important item in the equation—the mental and moral complexes of the Minister himself. That's a thing none of us may accurately assess. Though I've known Mr. Stevens more or less since he first entered politics in 1911 and for some years shared the glory of being his back-to-back neighbor with only a row of raspberry canes dividing his domicile and family from mine, I'd hesitate at being too positive in these deductions.

Be it known that Rt. Hon. H. H. Stevens is a pious evangelical in religion. For years he was a Methodist lay preacher. When the worldly out-of-town members at Ottawa would cross the river to Hull for a libacious—not to say libidinous—week-end—the present Minister of Trade and Commerce would be announced to spend his Sunday occupying the pulpit of some Methodist church. Perhaps it was a tribute to his high principles that election after election saw in his home town the church and the underworld votes go almost solidly for him.

With that little sidelight on the Minister's character, how is this for a probable picture of what happened? Here is the Minister with an evangelical urge in his mentality, filled with a sense of the iniquity of much that came before him in the Price Probe.

He can't unburden himself in the House without embarrassing his colleagues. It would raise a question as to his judicial fitness to continue as chairman if he should announce conclusions before all the evidence was in.

He receives an invitation to address the Political Study Club—an inner circle of his own party. The thing nearest to his mind is the Price Probe. He'd had no difficulty in preparing a crackerjack speech on that subject and it would be safe enough inside the secret circle of the Political Study Club. His evangelical instinct takes possession of him. He pictures evil after evil, wickedness after wickedness, and then winds up with the sermonic application to cast out evil, purge the ranks of the party and declare a war against sin.

It goes over big. The congregation is seized with a sense of sin. Many of them think how fine some of those sentences will sound in their own mouths when they come to carry the gospel and exhort the electors at the forthcoming election.

"Can't we get a copy of that speech," they say.

The pamphlet reaches some of the 'orrible examples named in the speech. They make protest to the Premier. His Minister is on his way west on a speech-making tour. He calls him to the long-distance phone and reads the Riot Act to him. Astounded and mortified at the publicity and the risk of consequences to his political career, the Minister of Trade and Commerce decides to taper off his heroics. Instead of purging the party and cutting out the cancerous growths he advocated at Ottawa, by the time he reaches Vancouver the sermonic injunction is changed to the painless pietism of:

> "Today the world fears the consequences of any given course of action: business fears losses; industry fears the rise of a ruthless competition.
>
> "These fears tend to destroy the morale of men in all countries. The best antidote to this fear is a clear conscience—the knowledge that a man has done not only the lawful but the right thing."

* * *

All of the above theorisings may be wrong, but they seem to me to fit the facts of the case much better than the suggestion that Hon. Mr. Stevens set out to dethrone his leader and place himself at the head of a new party, or the much more absurd suggestion that he and Premier Bennett put their heads together to plan a "putsch" to glorify Mr. Stevens at the expense of his leader and by some unexplained means to stampede the electorate into ecstacies of admiration for the government of the day.

Much more likely is the suggestion that Mr. Stevens was the victim of his own temperament; that he was surprised to find his speech to the Political Study Club had made him the Man of the Moment, and that he lost no time in scrambling to safety lest he win a martyr's crown at the cost of his portfolio.

It is said Argentina will offer to reduce her wheat acreage by 15 per cent. But Argentina promised to limit her exports to 100,000,000 bushels in the crop year just closed, and actually exported 150,000,000 bushels, or more than Canada. An international wheat agreement cannot be built upon a basis of bad faith, and there are many who think that even with good faith it is bad economics.

Don't Get Excited

By DOCTOR FRANK McCOY

It is an evidence of the highest culture when one can live in this rapidly changing, hurry-up age with a good control over all of the emotions. Those who have not attained such control find themselves torn by the passions of love, hatred, jealousy, etc. They are storm-tossed by over-emotion—going from the depths to the heights—from pleasure to pain—becoming alternately too depressed or too exalted.

Dr. F. McCoy

Besides the ordinary emotions which we recognize as existent, there is doubtless another common one which few have recognized. This is the simple emotion of excitement. Many get a nerve-stimulating thrill every time they hear the fire engine dashing by, or when they read of a great disaster. Their excitement is not truly caused by either fear or sorrow, or any other of the emotions ordinarily understood.

One who has the proper poise and calmness of mind does not allow himself to be too often excited by any emotion. But it is nevertheless true that there are many nerve-racked people who allow their minds to be storm-tossed by every unusual story or news about happenings which can in no way immediately concern them. Such excitement only depletes the nerve forces and brings on enervation.

The man of power is always one who has a steady control over all emotions, and who uses his mental and physical energy where it will do the most good. The fault seems to be that many do not understand upon what events and emotions they should place the proper emphasis.

Women, as a rule, may be said to be the more nervous, and seem to waste more energy upon trifles. The business or professional man would not go very far in accomplishing any successful work if he could not learn to concentrate upon the important things of the day, but spent most of his time wasting his nerve forces by continually being either too sad or too glad.

It might be well for everyone to take an emotional inventory at the end of each day. Take a piece of paper and write down a list of these emotions: Love, hatred, envy, jealousy, fear, malice. Then on another line, put these down: Work, sleep, recreation. Check off on every one of these items, trying to remember back through the day how much time and energy you have actually spent in the power of emotions and observe how well you have balanced the hours of the day.

It is probably best to work about eight hours, sleep eight, and use the other eight for recreation and study. There should certainly be a smattering here and there during your waking hours of remembrances of mild enjoyment, lovely thoughts and joyful moments; but as you take an inventory of your emotions you may find it helpful to cut down the amount of time you are wasting on fear, hatred, jealousy, malice and other emotions and excitements which only waste energy and contribute their share to producing both nervous and physical disorders.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

QUESTION—Mother asks: "Is there any rule for a nursing mother to follow as regards diet?"

ANSWER—There are many rules which it is important for a nursing mother to follow. She has a double duty—first, the obligation to her child and then the duty to herself to keep well at this time and avoid injury to her system caused through feeding her baby from her own blood without supplying it with the necessary elements to replace and repair tissues. I have written a special article on this subject and will be glad to send it to you.

Horoscope

By MARY BLAKE

On September 2 it may prove advisable to select your companions with care, if you wish to avoid running the chance of being bored. Some very stupid birds are gaily plumed, so it might be wise not to judge a person's mentality by external appearances.

Be cautious regarding money, especially in the way you carry it. A loss may be sustained if it is carelessly handled, or left laying around loose.

If September 2 is your birthday and you are a woman, it should prove a very happy day for you, full of pleasant surprises. You are blessed with an eye for beauty and a highly appreciative sense for things of artistic worth. Your placid disposition and eagerness to please should win you many friends, both in business and socially. Any line of business requiring the application of a skillful touch to things of beauty should prove a splendid field for one of your ability. Love will mean a great deal to you and marriage should provide a great sufficiency.

If a man and September 2 is your natal day, you require harmonious surroundings to enable you to do your best work. Designing, painting, planning or writing offer unlimited opportunities to a man possessing your technique, which is decidedly original. Of a deeply affectionate nature, you crave affection and will be happiest if you have a home of your own.

September 3 will be rife with a holiday spirit with the result that only businesses catering to the public appetite and amusement can expect to make money. It might be advisable, should you go to places where there is a likelihood of getting in large crowds, to make up your mind in advance you will let nothing ruffle your temper.

If a woman and September 3 is your natal day, you should receive a lot of attention on this date and enjoy yourself immensely. Financial matters may improve for you greatly through an unexpected source. If you marry be careful you do not do so for money, for that alone cannot buy love or happiness.

If a man and September 3 is your birth anniversary, you should prove very successful, providing you do not allow a mercenary spirit to dominate your actions or influence the selection of your friends. If you practice being considerate in your dealings with family and friends, the joy you will experience will more than compensate any trouble it might necessitate.

On This Date

A Day in Canadian History — o — By FRED WILLIAMS

On this date, in 1864, Charlottetown became the cradle of the Canadian Confederation. It was not so intended. All that was planned was that representatives of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island should meet and confer as to the advisability of a Maritime union. It was not a new proposition, indeed it dated back to 1814 when, in a letter to Chief Justice Sewell at Quebec, the Duke of Kent proposed a union of the colonies by the sea as a preliminary to a general union of the British possessions in North America. his royal highness proposing Windsor or Annapolis Royal as the capital of the tripartite confederacy.

Nothing was done; the idea drifted for years; in 1858 it was discussed with the Colonial office in London, but without result. In 1864, however, the three legislatures almost simultaneously passed resolutions favoring a discussion of the idea, and so it happened that on the first of September, 1864, Charles Tupper, Leonard Tilley and J. H. Pope headed delegations which met in the old Province building at Charlottetown.

The gathering had hardly got underway before it was announced that a delegation from the Province of Canada had arrived from Quebec and would like to be heard. They were admitted on the second day, and thereafter the idea of Maritime union was submerged in the larger scheme of Confederation. Five days were devoted to a debate upon the Canadian proporals; an adjournment of the Maritime conference was made to Halifax, where on the 10th, 11th and 12th further conversations were exchanged. A further conference took place at Saint John on the 16th, and there it was decided to defer the Maritime conference until after the Quebec conference in October. The Maritime men did their share in the debates at Quebec and in the drawing up of the resolutions upon which the British North America Act was founded, and then they made a trip west, visiting Montreal and Toronto. At the latter place the Maritime Union plan met its death, for the time being at any rate, the delegates deciding to "postpone the consideration of the question of a legislative union of the Maritime provinces."

Confederation followed. The Maritime union idea has been often revived in the ensuing half century; it is again alive topic, but it appears as distant as ever. Each province is jealous of its autonomy and the politicians prefer three fields of activity to one; the idea will remain an idea until the people speak!

The Mail Bag

PUBLIC CREDIT FOR PUBLIC NEEDS

Editor Bulletin: Why is it that statesmen of the world continue to look at things from the "poverty-stricken" standpoint when it can be shown that the world is really richer today than it was at the close of the war.

Their view is apparently bounded by the "cost of money" which prevents them from doing the things they would, those things which they recognize should be done in order to make a true civilization; without Nationalism or Socialism.

With the raw materal at hand, in the shape of unemployed labor on one side and natural resources on the other, there is nothing lacking except the willingness to issue sufficient paper tickets to bring these two potential wealth creators together in order to build a social system which can cater to the wants and desires of the people on a scale never attained before.

Let me give an instance. It costs approximately one cent to make and print a $10 bill. We can have one million dollars at a cost of one thousand dollars, or one hundred million for a cost of one hundred thousand. Now suppose we spend this money on roads, telephones and electrical power sites, thus providing work for all the unemployed in Alberta, at good wages, and building up provincial assets worth one hundred million dollars for an outlay of one hundred thousand dollars. The collateral for one hundred million dollars is surely there (if the work has been efficiently done) and there is no need to repay it for the simple reason that we did not borrow it. We created it! We also created the assets built through its use! The latter is perfectly good backing for the money.

When we raise a national loan under the present system, we do not borrow money from those who have it. They haven't got it; but we have given them the right to create it, which they do and then lend it back to us at interest, to their own profit and pleasure and very much to our discomfort. This is why we have public debts as fast as we get public services. In the end the debt always eats up the services. If we did things in the way I have suggested, we could build public services to the limit of our desires. If we built them efficiently and well, they would be perfectly good value for the face value of the money spent in creating them and should thus satisfy the requirements of even a sound conservative money system. The only money that it would be necessary to recover from the public by way of taxation would be the cost of maintaining these services (no capital costs and no interest charges) and the money put into circulation to create these services would provide such a price level for goods produced by private enterprise, that the people would have the money with which to pay their taxes.

On top of all this we should have a working, self-respecting people. Surely no one would argue that the province was going to the dogs simply because all the farmers had electric light and power on their farms and the townspeople had well filled larders and lots of employment, while with good roads connecting the abodes of both, mutual visits would be a pleasure.

By putting into their platform the plank of public credit for public needs, the Liberal party are lifting up a standard of living for the people which will establish them as the people's party. There will be a great future ahead of them if they carry out this policy of public credit for public needs. This is the one material thing wanting that prevents the people from having prosperity. The shackles that have held us chained to the "gold standard" were in fact the last stronghold of the Devil. If, as the Bible declares, "The love of money is the root of all evil, then, if we remove from the money system the love of it and substitute therefor the use of it by eliminating interest charges, we shall destroy the root evel from which nearly all social evils spring.

Sunshine Shafts

For her sweet course she chose cherry-pie, and afterwards pushed the stones on the side of her plate and counted them.

"I see, according to your fruit stones, that you are going to marry a rich man," said auntie, after the girl had finished counting.

"Yes," replied little Doris, "but I had to swallow two of them to do it."

"I would of took my cap off in the house, but I didn't know we had company till I heard Dad talkin' polite."

Her partner—If you are tired of dancing, Mrs. Newrocks, we will sit down and have a tete-a-tete.

Mrs. Newrocks—Oh, dear me, no, after such a big supper. I really couldn't eat anything.

An agitated assistant rushed up to the manager of the big store. "We've just caught a woman shoplifting."

"What has she taken?" asked the manager.

"Fifty yards of elastic," replied the assistant.

A Definition Of Money

By R. T. ELLIOTT, K.C.

Most of the learned, and in many instances helpful, compositions on the financial troubles of a nation living in seclusion while waiting for better times, are based on the theory that money and currency mean the same thing. They are two different propositions.

The produce of land has to be sold—and the output of labor has to be paid for—and the cost of governmental and municipal services has to be collected (so far as possible in advance), and for these purposes we need money. Although in practice most payments are made by cheque, there must be money behind the cheque. Money, therefore, has to be something which will buy anything offered for sale in the country; pay for any labor performed in the country; and pay any tax due to the government or any institution of government. Such money is constituted lawful by the government of the day and it may consist of anything from fish-hook to golden guineas.

This money must, in order to have value in circulation, be based upon a system of currency, involving a marshalling and use of all the assets produced by the resources of the country and the labor of the country, guaranteed by the credit of the government of the country so as to be capable of being used as well in international as in domestic trade.

The money of the country used for its domestic concerns may in nature and form have many modifications upon the currency of the country which must of necessity be kept on a basis of value internationally.

The international factor is what constitutes control of currency one of the vital factors of government; necessity to pay the producers of the nation and the workers of the nation in money which has full domestic purchasing power, so as to maintain an adequate national earning power and to guard against unemployment is another vital factor of government.

Adequacy and volume available for use constitute the two factors in which money and currency resemble each other. This is what gives rise to so much confusion of thought on financial questions; and keeps in existence the "sound money" and "gold basis" theory.

Men who deal in money by lending it at interest on security; and men who deal in currency by making it available for use in international transactions charging exchange for their services can charge more interest and more exchange when money and currency are scarce and difficult to get.

It being impossible to maintain a flexible domestic economy and a flexible currency for use in international transactions on a gold basis—owing to the fact that the world supply of gold is entirely inadequate for these purposes—men dealing in money and men dealing in currency are unanimously in favor of the gold standard because it makes money scarce and exchange high and forces the producers and the workers to accept a lower standard of living.

All the mystery talk about sound money and the intricacy of foreign exchange means nothing except a smoke screen behind which to enforce lower commodity prices, lower wages, and a reduced standard of wages. The Prime Minister of Canada is reported to have said that we will have to go back to the simpler mode of life of our forefathers.

'Money is sound so long as the credit of the nation is behind it; so is currency; provided no specially privileged class is given the right to select and direct the classes of individuals who shall be given the use of money and the classes of individuals who shall be given the use of currency.

This arbitrary control of money and of exchange is what makes our panics and deflations, and unemployment. The specially privileged class takes every possible short-cut towards getting all the money and all the currency and putting it in financial blinders and leading strings so as to keep the smallest possible volume of money in circulation and the least possible amount of currency available in international transactions so as to keep up the cost of exchange and to prevent interference with tariff subsidized interests.

These few facts are all you need to know about money and about currency and exchange—once you really do know them—and vote accordingly.

MARRIAGE
By
Dr. Albert Edward Wiggam
With Questionnaire

A remarkable little booklet written from the scientific viewpoint. It should prove of rapt interest not only to those of marriageable age but also to parents for its guidance value. It is packed with priceless information. It deals with heredity, how you get it, how you transmit it. Sent upon request. Include self-addressed stamped return envelope and extra 3c stamp to cover printing. Address Dr. Albert Edward Wiggam, care this newspaper. Just ask for "Marriage Booklet."

1.—Emphatically, yes. Dr. Clairette P. Armstrong, psychologist, in her book, "Why Boys Desert Their Homes," gives an appalling picture of neglect, misunderstanding and often brutal treatment both mental and physical by parents and secondarily of the profound failure in such cases of the school system. She says: "Society seems to conspire to protect parents. Why not parents be held responsible in court for their failure, not the boy?

2.—Yes, this is probably true, although it is also probably due not to any inborn tendency but to the fact that men are brought up more than women to deal with practical things. On the farm the man's life is dealing with hogs, horses, corn, trading, prices, etc., the woman's life is dealing with the children, getting dinners for neighbor visitors, gossiping with them about other neighbors, etc. The same general facts hold true in city life as well. However, women who are brought up in business and have to deal with hard real problems are as deeply interested in things as men are.

3.—There is no evidence that it is. In fact it is doubtful that there is any such thing as a fighting instinct either in men or women. Dr. Knight Dunlap in his fine new social psychology, "Civilized Life," says when we say men fight because they have a fighting instinct is no more scientific than to say they fight because they fight. The entire nervous system learns from experience to defend the individual when in danger, or imagined danger, or when the individual's sense of importance is insulted. There is not a particle of evidence that these tendencies or learning potentialities are any greater in one sex than in another.

Our Old Country Letter - - -

By J. EDWARD NORCROSS

MANCHESTER, England, Aug.—(By Mail)—"London, 220¼; Holyhead, 39," said the signpost. And then the memory of something real long ago returned to me—not too accurately, perhaps, so, since I cannot now look up the authorities, the reader must take it for what it is worth.

J. E. Norcross

For this was the old road to Ireland, the road along which His Majesty's mails sped from London to Dublin through the heart of North Wales, Snowdon looking down disdainfully on the horses struggling through the mud and up the hills of the king's highway—just as it now looks down on the motor-buses and cars that rush in headlong haste over the excellent tarvia.

So it came about that 170 years ago, approximately, a family coach labored up to the old inn that still stands at Capel Curig, not very far from the signpost, and called for a change of horses.

It was noticed that the arms of an ancient and coronetted house were painted on the panels and that the owner, who was accompanied by his lady, was in a tremendous hurry. There was a suggestion that as it was getting late in the day and a storm was brewing amid the great peaks the couple had better tarry for the night.

* * *

HIS Lordship, however, would not hear of anything of the sort. He would not even wait for a meal but, hurrying the hostlers in their task, resumed his journey as quickly as possible. Her ladyship seemed to be in great distress and the maids of the inn, who had taken furtive peeps at her, exchanged significant glances. "It's a shame," they whispered.

"We are not too late," said His Lordship when they reached Holyhead where the Irish packet was just about to sail for Dublin. The wind was rising and there was every prospect of a rough passage.

"Our business brooks no delay," he declared as he and his lady, despite the threat of bad weather, went aboard.

Their expectations of a stormy voyage were fully realized and the poor woman was more dead than alive when she was carried ashore.

"The child will be born on Irish soil," said her husband.

And it was, and that is how it comes about that Ireland claims as a native Arthur Wellesley, the great Duke of Wellington.

* * *

THE long road winds through a wild and lovely valley, shut in by towering mountains. I know the Rockies and the Selkirks and the Cascades, and I know that the heights of these Welsh peaks are insignificant compared with those of the pinnacles that tower into British Columbia skies. Snowdon itself, loftiest of summits south of the Scottish border, is nothing like as high as Grouse mountain, which the boys and girls of Vancouver climb every fine Sunday as an afternoon's outing.

Nevertheless I aver that Snowdon and Moel Siabod and Tryfan are authentic mountains, man-killers some of them. They have been carved out of a great plateau by glacial action which has left innumerable tarns and lakes, each with its own legend. Moreover, they are very, very old. They were being rough-hewn by ice and flood when the Rocky mountains were still soft strata at the bottom of a great ocean that extended from the eastern base of the Selkirks to the Laurentians.

The region seems the very home of romance. Grim, precipitous rocks form a cave of the winds appropriately known as the Devil's Kitchen and are reflected in the waters of a sullen tarn, Ilyn Idwal, over which, it is said, no bird ever flies—such a tarn as the gloomy, black lake described by Poe in "The Fall of the House of Ussher". "What a scene for a murder in a novel," exclaimed a great Victorian writer when he saw it.

Not very far away is Beddgelert, which means the grave of Gelert. You remember Gelert, the faithful hound that defended its master's little son from a wolf and by that master's fatal error was killed itself—whereupon the master found too late, as the poem of your childhood had it, that "the faithful hound the wolf had slain, to save Llewelyn's heir."

Unfortunately the debunkers have been at work on the story and it has gone the way of the apple of William Tell and the cakes that King Alfred did not burn.

True, they will show you the grave of Gelert but there is no Gelert in it. It was built in a meadow by an inn-keeper who had so often been asked by tourists where the mythical grave of the mythical hound was that he most obligingly constructed one.

* * *

IF, HOWEVER, Welsh legends are suspect, there is plenty of authentic. This road from London to Holyhead was once the route from Rome to the extreme west of the empire of the Caesars. The legions "thundered by" at least once as they marched to do battle with the Druids of whom they slew an enormous number.

The Romans, however, could make little of Wales. It was not, indeed, until Edward I took the country in hand that the warring chiefs of its septs were reduced to order.

It was all very well for Gray to bring on the Druids again to curse the Plantagenet monarch alliteratively—"Ruin seize thee, ruthless King"—but the father of the first English Prince of Wales, like the great statesman he was, brought civilization to the country.

And they are still making history there. Near the signpost already mentioned is a monument the Welsh wording of which is translated as follows:

"In loving memory of those who lost their lives from this parish in the war, 1914-18". The parish is that of Capel Curig, "the curate's chapel". Few and far between are the houses, yet there are 31 names on the stone. And this says nothing of others who went and who came back wounded and otherwise injured. The valley must have been emptied of its able-bodied men.

* * *

THE Druids are not extinct even now. Every year they appear at the National Eisteddfod, the great Welsh festival of music, poetry and drama, to which Welshmen flock not only from all over Wales, but also from wherever Welshmen have settled in Great Britain, and even from the United States.

This year's Eisteddfod is just over. It was marked by a function that has left some bitterness behind it.

Some years ago William Randolph Hearst, the American publisher, came over to Wales and did one of those things that do not endear wealthy Americans to Welsh people or, for that matter, to English people either.

He bought an ancient Welsh castle, St. Donat's, and embellished it with priceless armour and antiquities, frequently buying these up in competition with the National Museum of Wales. He got possession of other ancient ruins and looted them of their stones for the enrichment of St. Donat's.

Then he put in a new bathing-pool and filled the place with film stars who scandalized the natives by wandering around the lanes in pyjamas. In fact, he turned St. Donat's into a small edition of Hollywood.

* * *

THE resentment of the Welsh, than whom no people are more loyal to their ancient traditions, reached its height when Mr. Hearst, notorious for his hatred of Britain, hoisted the Stars and Stripes over St. Donat's. Nevertheless, nothing much might have been heard of the matter outside of Wales had it not been for a blunder on the part of Mr. Lloyd George which may cost him some of his popularity in the principality.

Mr. Lloyd George has been for many years the outstanding speaker at the Eisteddfod. This year was no exception. As one brilliant commentator put it, he took all the limelight, depriving even the chaired Bard—the winner of the principal competition—of some to which he was entitled.

Then, in the name of Mr. Hearst, he invited the chief Druids to proceed to St. Donat's Castle in their robes and there sing and make merry.

A number of them went and performed the picturesque ceremony of asking for hospitality, as the ancient bards were wont to do at the castles they passed on their way to the Eisteddfod—for the Eisteddfod is an ancient institution.

Mr. Lloyd George appeared as host. Mr. Hearst had done the thing well. Medieval costumes were the only wear. Halberdiers patrolled the battlements. Harpists in fourteenth century dress were posted in the minstrels' gallery and even the waiters and waitresses looked as if they might have stepped out of one of Sir Walter Scott's novels.

* * *

HAVING been saluted in proper form, Mr. Lloyd George, looking down from the battlements, ordered the portcullis to be raised and the pageantry of a feast of the Middle Ages was begun.

It was all very pleasant for those who participated in it, but it has created a burning question in Wales.

Among those attending the Eisteddfod were a number of Welshmen from the United States and they were bitter about the whole thing.

"There are 3,000,000 Welshmen in the United States," one of them is reported to have said. "We had to live there all through the war when Hearst was attacking our people. The St. Donat's banquet to us is the sort of thing Hollywood would stage."

As to Mr. Lloyd George—"Well," says Hannen Swaffer, the famous columnist, "they won't ever have any Welsh drama worth talking about while Lloyd George wants to play all the parts. Mind," he continues, "I don't blame him. He is still the best actor in Wales."

THE ten years' licence of the British Broadcasting Corporation has still nearly two years and a half to run but already the question what is to be done with the institution thereafter is being discussed.

It is generally admitted that the present arrangements have worked very well, marvellously so when it is considered that nobody had the least idea in 1926 what tremendous developments were in store.

Radio has become such a household convenience that every other home in the country has a receiving set, the total number of licences issued for the present year up to the end of July being 6,395,560, as against 5,624,956 for last year.

The B.B.C. was created by Royal Charter but is not under governmental control. Two of the five governors are appointed by the government but, since they can be out-voted, the governors, as a body, are a law unto themselves.

Certain powers were reserved. The B.B.C. is bound to broadcast any matter that any government department requires to be broadcast and may be inhibited from broadcasting matter specified in a written communication from the postmaster-general.

In emergency, too, the government may take over the whole operation of broadcasting. Care was also taken that a proportion of the revenues went into the state coffers.

* * *

IT IS remarkable that, as one leading newspaper has observed, the dangers now foreseen in relation to the B.B.C. are not in the least those that might have been feared when such autocratic powers were given to the board of governors.

They are rather of an order pointed out by Lord Ponsonby who, in a most amusing address broadcast the other evening, pleaded for the preservation of the varied native accents of the English people, whether the burr of Northumberland or the soft vowel sounds of Devonshire.

He was afraid, he said, that people might try to speak like the B.B.C. announcers and that in time there would be a dreadful uniformity of accent all over the country.

It certainly was not foreseen eight years ago that the B.B.C. would become an authority on pronunciation, taking in Great Britain a position something like that of the French Academy across the channel, and it is urged that, since this has come about, through force of circumstances, it should be able to avail itself of the best scholarship and most balanced judgment obtainable.

* * *

IN VIEW of the power of the B.B.C. to affect public taste, what applies to speech applies also to musical, dramatic and other forms of entertainment.

So far it has maintained high standards without losing "the common touch".

The danger is that a body of mandarins may be set up in authority who will give the public what it deems good for it, or, on the other hand, that a too easy-going direction may make "giving the public what it wants", or, rather what the least cultured want, its guiding rule.

Associate boards and tribunals have been suggested for consultation purposes, leaving the final control where it is at present. It is not difficult to see that all sorts of trouble might arise were this done. A distinguished tribunal whose decisions were set aside might bring about complications that would be more exciting than edifying.

Fortunately there is plenty of time in which to formulate the terms of the new charter. At the moment, however, there is reason to think that the fewer the changes made in the present arrangements the better.

GUESSING WHAT PARTNER HOLDS

Sometimes when partner has opened the auction or made a forcing overcall, your own hand shows what partner should hold. When partner has done nothing more than support your opening call, particularly if he has returned you to your original suit call, it is very dangerous to assume that he holds any specific side honors, as shown by the first hand given today.

Bidding went: South, 1-Club; North, 2-Clubs; East, 2-Spades; South, 2-No Trumps; North, 3-Clubs; South, 3-No Trumps; trusting partner for a stop to the diamond suit.

Instead of leading his singleton spade, West led his 7 of diamonds, then overtook East's return lead of the K of that suit, winning 6 diamond tricks, and defeating the contract 2 tricks.

There is a certain game at clubs. In case West leads his lone spade there is a small slam at clubs. Quite a difference in score, even if South was not vulnerable.

Note the next hand, on the bidding of which East had a perfect right to assume specific cards in his partner's hand.

Bidding went: West, 1-Diamond; North, 1-Heart; East, 2-Clubs; South, 2-spades; West, 3-Clubs; East, 3-No Trumps; West, 4-Diamonds, showing considerable length in the suit, which was one thing his partner wanted to know; East, 4-No Trumps; West, 5-Clubs, again showing both length and strength; East, now satisfied that his partner held the two minor Aces plus the K of one of the major suits, 7-No Trumps.

East had calculated upon at least 10 tricks in the two minor suits, with 1 trick in one major suit and 2 tricks in the other major suit. Of course the hand was spread for a grand slam, with a trick to spare.

New Bullet Goes Through Steel Helmet

LONDON, Sept. 1 — A bullet which, equipped with an aluminum cap, can smash its way through a steel plate on which an ordinary service bullet scarcely makes a mark has just been perfected here. Steel helmets are no protection whatever against it. Every soldier supplied with this bullet will immediately become a danger to any armored car or tank. The new bullet has been perfected by the research council of national defense after several years of experimental work.

It is a high velocity light bullet capable of being fired from a rifle with a muzzle velocity of 6,000 feet a second, more than three times as high as the muzzle velocity of the ordinary service rifle. At present the British army is using the same rifle as during the war, but will shortly be rearmed with an entirely new rifle.

Senator Griesbach Gives Bride In Marriage Friday

Norwood United Church, lovely with late summer flowers, was the setting for a quiet wedding Friday evening at eight o'clock, when Eleanor Thompson, daughter of Mr. W. T. Thompson, of Appeley, Tewksberry, England, became the bride of Charles Magnus Willetts, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Willetts. Rev. S. H. Irving performed the ceremony, and during the signing of the register Mrs. Howes sang, "All Joy Be Thine" accompanied by her daughter, Miss Howes.

The bride was charmingly gowned in white ninon de soie and carried a bouquet of pink roses and valley lilies. She was attended by Miss Ruth Clements of Vegreville, who wore pale green lace and carried sunset gladioli. Mr. Clifford Willetts was his brother's best man. The bride was given in marriage by Senator Griesbach.

Mrs. W. A. Griesbach served a wedding supper at her residence in the west end following the ceremony, when the wedding party included: Mr. and Mrs. Connor of Winnipeg, Mr. and Mrs. Willetts, Mrs. Tait, of Canyon Creek, Mr. and Mrs. Field, Rev. Back From Paris Studies

Wearing a handsome two-piece woolen frock with bright silk scarf tucked into the amusing square neckline, Miss Wilna Splivalo, young California sculptress, arrives in New York after two years of study in Paris.

Social - Personal

LIFE does hold unbelievable moments . . times in which we are so completely lifted above above the commonplace that there is a glorious sense of wonder and pure delight. Perhaps it is a stretching of the spirit to its fullest height, and at some moment of sunrise or sunset, high sound or rich color, we are suddenly carried for a brief interval to an indescribable realm. Barrie talks about it, sometimes, and says that when life is too beautiful something spills over, and "spirits walk abroad." I don't know. I only feel sure that there is occasionally a moment when the supernatural verges on the natural, and the world is filled with singing voices.

The woman whose husband holds an official post that requires a great deal of entertaining on her part, and whose busy life is full to overflowing, told me she knew that moment, once, listening to a haunting Spanish folk song high in the mountains. A professional girl whose days are crammed with business, found it in the first hush that fell upon thousands of people packed in a great open air auditorium, when an orchestra conductor lifted his baton, and the notes of a swelling symphony broke across the stillness of the night, under the stars.

It came to me once, lying on water the color of amythests, warmer than the trade winds that rippled the sea, and so clear I could see golden sand far below. There, lazy under sunshiny skies, carried by the buoyancy of waters that will not let one down, I felt suddenly that same exhileration that gives meaning to life, and lends its richness through the darker lanes and along the drabber avenues.

Perhaps only to those who have brushed the valley of the shadow does it come most keenly. Someone told me every breath, every sound, every bit of color or light or music was unbelievably precious when she emerged from long suffering.

When you were a child, did you ever put off the moment of taking a long desired cool drink, knowing that the endurance of thirst would be so tremendously compensated for by the refreshing effect of the water? Sometimes circumstances do that same thing for all of us, and out of the darkness sudden light is almost too blinding.

"Never be afraid to feel too deeply" a woman said to some girls who were just beginning to know the contacts and forces of life in the world outside. "Only be afraid of the time when you cannot feel at all."—L. C. D

ANN CARMICHAEL IS BRIDE OF SHIRWILL WOOD

A lovely wedding was solemnized Wednesday evening at McDougall United Church when Miss Anne Carmichael, daughter of Mrs. H. E. Carmichael and the late Mr. H. E. Carmichael, became the bride of Mr. Shirvvill Woods, only son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Wood of Byemoor.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. S. McCall, D.D., before a profusion of gladioli, sweet peas and asters intermingled with palms and ferns. Sweet peas in pastel shades tied with white satin ribbons marked the guest pews.

Miss Audrey Stutchbury was the soloist, singing "O Promise Me," and Mr. Miller played the wedding marches. The ushers were Mr Roy Weir and Mr. George Garraway.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her brother, was graceful in a gown of white satin, made in princess lines and the skirt cut en train. She wore a picture hat of white silk mohair and white slippers and carried a shower bouquet of maiden hair fern and roses.

Miss Pearl Carmichael was her sister's bridesmaid. Her dress was pale pink organza with a cape and skirt of ruffles. Her picture hat was of pink crepe. She carried a shower bouquet of pink and white carnations.

Mr. Royce Phillips was the best man.

At a reception held at the Shasta the guests were received by Mrs. H. E. Carmichael and Mrs. D Wood. The bride's mother was gowned in taupe grey crepe with lighter grey accessories. Mrs. Wood wore navy crepe trimmed with satin of the same shade. Each wore a corsage of sweet peas.

Those invited were: Mr. and Mrs. J. Harrington, Mr. and Mrs. H Telford, Mr. and Mrs. F. Williams, Dr. and Mrs. Allinell (Ponoka), Mr and Mrs. J. Hoyle, Mr. and Mrs. A Simonson, Mr. and Mrs. G. Weddings

FREAM—MYLES

The marriage was solemnized at Holy Trinity church, Edmonton, on Saturday evening, Aug. 25, at five-thirty, of Alice Myles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Myles and George Fream, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Fream. Rev. G. G. Reynolds, rector, performed the ceremony. The bride who was lovely in her gown of peach crepe carried sweetheart roses, and was given in marriage by her father. She was attended by her sister, Miss Jean Myles, gowned in pale yellow organdie and carrying pink and mauve sweetpeas.

After a reception and dinner held at the Corona hotel, Mr. and Mrs. Fream left on a motor trip to Waterton, Glacier and Yellowstone parfs, and on their return will reside in Edmonton.

Place Of Radio In National Life Told At Conference

Luncheon on the spacious verandahs of the Mayfair Golf and Country club was a pleasant interlude in the business discussions that occupied the attention of the Federation of University Women, meeting this week, when they motored down to the charming clubhouse on Wednesday.

Talks on radio and education were arranged for the luncheon meeting program, with Miss Sheila Marryat of the department of extension in the University, Miss Jessie Montgomery, extension librarian, and Dr. Turville, adviser to women students in the University of Western Ontario, and professor of German and Italian, as the speakers.

Miss Marryat gave the introductory address, telling briefly of the place of radio in the national life. Education of the listening audience is one of the newest and most important developments in radio broadcasting. In Germany, state compulsion enforces the German public to hear certain Nazi programs broadcast at certain times daily. In Italy Fascist programs are also heard, as a duty to the state. Miss Marryat told of the 60 large broadcasting stations in Russia and their programs of a cultural nature which are especially interesting.

Radio in adult education and radio in the schools was described by Miss Jessie Montgomery, who related tales of the remote parts of England and the British Isles where people are given the cultural and educational programs by radio, which mean so much to them. The libraries work in co-operation with broadcasting companies and subjects of literature, art, music and geography are supplemented by books supplied from the local lending libraries. In the schools of England, in certain districts radios are supplied and national broadcasts are of interest in the course of each day's lessons.

Dr. Turville, speaking of the international aspects of radio, mentioned the obstacles of divergence of time, and language, which must be overcome before the full ideal of radio for all people is realized.

Mrs. I. F. Morrison welcomed the visiting guests to the affair and introduced the speakers.

MISSIONARY'S PASSING IS MOURNED HERE

The passing of Peter W. Robertson, beloved missionary of Fong Tsuen, Canton, China, early in July brought great sorrow to his many friends the world over, and particularly to the wide circle in Edmonton.

A friend wrote of him as follows: "Surrounded by loving Chinese friends and attended by his devoted wife, Peter W. Robertson, Fong Tsuen, Canton, China, passed peacefully away, to his eternal home July 6—1934. The funeral was held the following Saturday from the little home, surrounded by the beautiful flower garden, that he loved

Friends of various nationalities, Chinese, Japanese, Jews, a Russian, a Portuguese as well as many from the British Empire and the United States gathered to pay their respect to this beloved missionary.

Ever since Mr. and Mrs. Robertson took up work in Fong Tsuen, twelve years ago, they have worked quietly and effectively. Mr Robertson taught Bible classes in many places, worked among students returned from Canada, and in every contact he witnessed naturally and beautifully for Christ. His passing was just the natural opening into a larger life. As he wrote in his diary, "As one lives, so he dies, sure in his faith in Christ."

Mr. Robertson was well known and highly esteemed in Edmonton. He was born in Williamstown, Ontario, and with Mrs. Robertson moved to Edmonton about twenty-eight years ago. He was a faithful member of Westminster Presbyterian Church (Central United) and a member of session. He was always deeply interested in the Chinese and beloved by them.

He leaves to mourn a devoted wife, who will carry on the work, which is centered principally in a Chinese Sunday School, numbering upwards of two hundred children.

Their only son, Douglas, passed away, in Edmonton, thirteen years ago.

SOUND ADVICE FOR GOOD SECRETARY

DEAR MISS DIX.—I am a young, attractive girl of 21. I have finished my business course and am now entering an office as secretary. I have a very good job and my employer is a splendid business man and naturally I wish to do just the right things and say the right things. What qualities does an employer wish in a secretary, and what should her attitude be at the office? ALICE.

Dorothy Dix

Answer:

The advice that Thomas Jefferson gave to the United States in regard to its conduct with foreign powers is an equally good slogan for every girl to live by who works in an office: "Friendship with all. Entangling alliances with none." Be friendly, but not gushing. Be polite, but not effusive. Be prudent, but not a prude. Be easy to talk to, but not a chatterbox. Keep your relationship with all and sundry on a strictly formal business basis, and this goes not only for your employer and the other men in the office, but for the men who come and go on business errands.

Of course, there are some employers who consider petting and necking part of a secretary's duties. Such a one bodes a girl no good. So, if you have had the bad luck to draw one of these beasts as a boss, throw up your job and leave. It is better to save your soul than it is your pay envelope.

Not many men, however, are of this caliber. The average man is decent and treats his secretary with respect, and even a lot of philanderers do not mix their work and love-making.

Hence the average man likes his secretary to assume an impersonal relationship to him and to regard herself as just a cog in the big wheel of business. He doesn't like one who is always putting flowers on his desk or who introduces the pink-tea motif into their relationship, or who does anything else continually to remind him that she is a pretty young woman instead of an office necessity.

Don't play up your sex. Don't try to make sex take the place of good work. Don't delude yourself into thinking that a baby stare will atone for not being able to spell and turn out neat copy. Not even if you had the S.A. of a Greta Garbo could you hold down a good job if your letters were smeary and you quoted the wrong prices to a customer.

Give the frigid air to the desk hounds who hover around every pretty girl and take up her time and attention with their idle chatter. Turn down the strangers who ask you "how about a little bite and a show tonight," and the out-of-town customers who want to take you out and show you a good time. Do all of your dating on your own time and outside of the office.

Be prompt. There is nothing that gets on an employer's nerves like having a secretary stroll in five or 10 minutes late, and then spend five or 10 minutes more in putting on her complexion and re-arranging the cupid's bow on her mouth.

Take an interest in your work. Put some pep into it. Try to find out what it is all about. Try diligently to improve your technique and to do all the little things that will save your employer time and worry. Be on your tiptoes, eager to do anything to promote the prosperity of the firm. Thus shall you become "our invaluable Miss Smith."

Don't tell office secrets. Don't discuss your employer's affairs with any one, not even your own family. It is dishonorable in the first place and it loses you your job in the second place, if it is ever found out. No girl can have a more valuable reputation in the commercial world than being tight-lipped.

Dress well, but not too well. Wear becoming clothes, but appropriate ones. Don't go to the office dolled up as if you were going to a party. Look like a competent business woman instead of a debutante who just dropped in accidentally for a minute. You wouldn't have any confidence in the business ability of the man who came to work in a dress suit, nor do you have any in the girl who is perched up on high-heeled slippers and who is little "fluffy ruffles." You have to look the part in business, as on the stage, to be convincing.

Park your emotions at home. Don't fall in love with your boss. Don't get hysterics every time your work is criticized. Don't indulge in nerves and tempers and you will make the kind of secretary whose price is above rubies. DOROTHY DIX.

Take Care Of Your Hands To Make Them Like Helen's

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty"

A well-known Broadway columnist, who has been out in Hollywood for some time now, tells me that the soft-voiced, cameo-faced Helen Vinson of cinema fame has the most beautiful hands he's ever seen. Helen, it seems, was a professional model before the cinema moguls woke up to her charm and talent. And her hands were continually in demand by advertising agencies for photographic purposes.

Of course, hands of such great beauty are not seen every day. But there are a good many gals whose hands, while really pretty, are robbed of true loveliness merely by ugly nails. Ridged nails constitute the most unattractive of all nail conditions. Such nails are caused, usually, by some acid condition of the blood, or by some internal disorder. And a physician's advice is usually needed for their complete correction.

Careful manicuring and proper lubrication, however, help to correct such nails. The nails should be carefully manicured at least once a week. And each night, the fingertips should be soaked in a warmed mixture of equal parts of lanolin, sweet almond oil and spermacetti. A bit of the mixture should be massaged into the base of each nail and allowed to remain on overnight, too.

However, although it may take time to completely correct the ridged condition of such nails, a great deal can be done to obscure the ridges. If the ridges are deep, wrap a bit of cotton around an orange stick, dip it into olive oil and then into powdered pumice, and rub it over each nail gently until the worst ridges have been removed. Then, using a good, fine nail polish, buff your nails briskly.

You must be particularly careful in using liquid nail polish, if you have ridged nails. Never use brilliant polishes. Use a very pale polish only. If you use one of the bright, darker polishes, it will accumulate between the ridges and give the nails an unattractive, streaked appearance. A pale tint of liquid polish, however, will help to make the nails appear presentable. For the colorless lacquer will flow down between the ridges and present a smooth, even surface to the eye.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Bleaches

Marie: The best bleaches for the hands are lemon juice and peroxide, full strength. I do not advise the use of vanishing cream, as I think that it clogs the pores.

Milia

Dandruff

Hair

C. K. M.: The salt water treatments and castor oil shampoos described in my "Beauty Culture" booklet are excellent for preventing the hair from falling and for making it thick and glossy. The full instructions are too long to print here.

HELEN VINSON

Plastic Surgery

Sarah: I do indeed approve of plastic surgery in extreme cases, providing that a skilled and reliable surgeon is engaged to do the necessary work.

What's What

Question—I have profited many times by your helpful column and now would like to have you settle this question for me. I have been going out with a bachelor who is a professional man and who is several years my senior. He is well known in the community, and so am I. I have been acquainted with this man about five years, but had not gone out with him until very recently. He asked me to dinner one evening and I accepted. Then, to my amazement, I found that the dinner was set in his apartment. Of course, I did not know that when I accepted. Since then he has asked me several times to dinner, but I have declined, because I think it questionable as to whether a young woman should dine alone with an older gentleman in his apartment, especially considering our standing and the size of the community. Also in the apartment building are others of my profession who may draw unpleasant conclusions. My friends think I'm "Victorian" in believing it is wrong to go to a man's apartment for dinner. What do you advise? K. E.

Answer—It is quite all right to dine at a man's apartment if a chaperon accompanies you. Otherwise, it is all wrong. Your standing in the community has nothing to do with the matter except to intensify its impropriety. You are quite justified in declining other tete-a-tete "home" dinners with Mr. Bachelor.

A BEDTIME STORY

Story by HAL COCHRAN Pictures by GEORGE SCARBO

"Now that the hunter's out of sight," said Goldy, "it will be all right to call the beasts out of the cave. Somebody whistle loud.

"When they are out we'll have some fun." Then Duncy said, "I'll be the one to whistle, 'cause I am the best of all the Tiny crowd."

"Oh, yeah?" Scouty loudly cried. "Just wait until we all have tried, and then you'll find you're not so good. Go right ahead and start."

So Duncy tried to, but his tune was very weak, and pretty soon wee Dotty said, 'Be careful, lad, you'll blow your cheeks apart."

* * *

Then Duncy stopped. "I've had enough," said he. "I pant and then I puff, but all I've done is waste my breath. Someone else try their luck."

"Okay," yelled Windy. "Hark to me. My whistle's strong as it can be." But, when he tried, no sound came forth. Cried he, "My lips get stuck."

This made the tiny hunter smile. Said he, "I'll whistle for a while." He did, and it was very loud, but no beasts came in sight.

"Why, what's the matter?" Dotty said. "We're wasting time. Let's go ahead and chase the beasts out of the cave. Then all will be all right."

All of the Tiniest ran inside and very shortly Scouty cried, "Hey! Here they come." And sure enough, the beasts raced into view.

"That's fine," the hunter shouted. "Now, you Tinymites get out, somehow." A rumbling noise then followed. Into air some big rocks flew.

"An avalanche," the hunter cried. "You Tinies better stay inside." Then, when a big rock reached the cave, it settled down to stay.

"Oh, goodness me, we're in a fix. Is that one of the hunter's tricks?" yelled Goldy, with a frown. "That rock has blocked the passageway."

THE DOCTOR'S ORDERS

By Jeanette Lewis

"How are you feeling, Joe?"

"Couldn't feel better and keep both feet on the ground, Doc," Joe replied.

Mighty few people had the affrontery to address Professor J. Addington Halstead as "Joe." Doctor Seward was one of the mighty few who dared, but then, the doctor had assisted in ushering the Halstead baby into this well-known world.

The "professor" part Joe brought on all by himself, through hard work to earn the money for hard study. At this time he was rather a young man to have the chair of chemistry at Balinbroke College.

"No profit in folks like you, Joe. Glad to see you. I'll stop on the way for a chat," and the doctor drove on about his doctor business.

Professor Halstead had returned to his native town for his summer vacation on the night before. Station Master Gorham mentioned it to the doctor when he saw him that evening. He mentioned it to everyone he met. Gorham took pride in disseminating such news as he learned by watching the arrivals and departures at the North Selina railroad station.

Halstad had been fastening up some of his mother's climbing roses when the doctor stopped long enough to shout his greeting. He went in and his mother asked if that wasn't the doctor. She hadn't looked out but recognized the voice.

"The same jovial old Doc, mother," he said, "and evidently he was taking a patient out for an airing, a woman."

"Was she young and did she have real yellow hair, Addington?"

"She didn't strike me as being anile, mother, but I didn't notice her hair. I might have noticed it if she hadn't had any hair."

His mother regarded him thoughtfully.

"You are a wonderful son, Addington, but awful queer, sometimes. I can't imagine a young man your age not noticing pretty girls. That was probably the doctor's niece, a Miss Alice Dutton, who has come to live with him. She's an awful nice girl."

"Those Van Fleet roses are growing all over the veranda roof. I must extend the trellis, mother."

Mrs. Halstead regarded her only offspring with increased amazement.

"I was telling you about Doctor Seward's pretty young niece, Addington. You will see her soon; he'll stop in to visit you and have her along."

"Yes, mother. By the way, what happened to that peony bed that used to be at the south corner of the garage?"

His mother sighed and shook her head.

"Didn't you ever think of a wife and a home, Addington?"

"Whose wife? I hope you don't think I am a philanderer." His eyes twinkled as he said this.

"Your wife, dear. Please don't pretend to be stupid."

"But I haven't any wife, mother; how could I think—"

Suddenly Joe heard the doctor say, "He's better looking than when I first saw him, Alice."

Joe turned around and saw the doctor and his blonde niece. His face reddened with embarrassment as the doctor introduced Alice; and she extended her hand.

"I love gardens and garden soil, Mr. Halstead," she said and made him shake hands.

"She didn't bite you, now, did she, Addington?"

"Scarcely."

"She's real smart and intelligent." Alice Dutton confided in her uncle on the way home that she thought he was an old tease, telling her that this Professer Halstead was a crusty woman-hater.

"He's real nice, his eyes are splendid and I liked him at once. What made you think that he would be afraid of me?"

"Joe never was one for the girls. Too bad. He's as fine a young man as I ever helped bring into the world, and I guess in the 40 years I've practiced I have helped a small army of 'em into the world."

Within a week Alice Dutton was over at Mrs. Halstead's with some sedums. She had noticed their lack in the rock garden.

"Good lands, Alice, dear, Joe attends to that. I'm no hand," and she called Joe in and told him to go and set out the plants.

Joe and Alice had quite a talk about gardens and the plants and to Joe's surprise Alice knew considerable about the chemicals of soil.

By the end of the month Joe suddenly discovered that he had not seen Alice for several days. He made inquiries.

"She's over with Mrs. Thorpe, Joe, helping her out because two of her children are sick and her husband can't leave his work down in Phelpsburgh," the doctor explained.

It was a full week before Joe saw Alice. They took a ride together to get some ferns and shade-loving wild flowers to set out in a shady nook on the doctor's grounds. Joe seemed to enjoy himself immensely.

And then Alice had to be gone four more days helping care for a young mother because the nurse that was engaged didn't get there.

Doctor Seward chanced to meet Joe downtown and, as usual, asked him how he felt.

"Not so good, to tell you the truth. I think I got a touch of sun. I've been working in mother's garden quite a lot in the heat," Joe said.

"Keep out of the sun, Joe," the doctor advised.

Alice was back and he saw her a couple of times. Then she went out for a couple of days on an emergency case to help her uncle and so it was. Joe went over to the doctor's house one day. The doctor was washing his car.

"Hey, Joe, sit down for a while," the doctor greeted, "Alice just went down to the store."

"Came to see you, Doc," Joe replied. "I think I need an examination; truth is, I'm pretty well shot, can't—"

"Come right in, Joe," and the doctor left his car washing and took him into his office. He gave him a skilled examination. Alice came home, found the office door locked and knew that a patient was probably inside.

"M-m-m-m, can't eat much, don't sleep well, mighty restless, can't concentrate. Rather serious, Joe."

"Is it—it can be cured, can't it, Doctor?"

"Certainly. Now shall I give you a lot of high-sounding medical terms or diagnose your serious case in plain talk?"

"Plain, Doc."

"Then here it is, Joe. You are in love. That's all; you are very much in love. The cure—the best cure, is to marry the girl if she will have you."

Professor J. Addington Halstead eyed his doctor, then stared out of the window. He saw Alice out putting water in the bird bath. Without a word to the doctor he went out to the bird bath and they walked through the garden and down the lane to the lake and it was away past dinner time when they returned.

"Doc," the professor called out, gaily, "I am to marry the girl at once, and I feel practically well already!"

Care of Brooms

With a little care a broom will last a long time. Here is one precaution to take: Make sure that your broom is dry after it has been used in water. If you put it away with the handle down (which is the best way), and it is not dry, the water will work its way down to the handle and reach the wire. The wire will rust and the handle will fall out.

Minute Make-Ups

By V. V.

When liquid nail enamel is applied by a professional it is usually brushed on from east to west, thereby avoiding those little pools at the edges that harden and become unsightly. When applied at home it is often brushed on with a north-south direction which is apt to make the manicure look amateurish—especially around the cuticle.

Tomorrow—Lemon Bleach.

"OH, YOU ARE GETTING FAT!"

Woman's Action After Friend's Remarks

NOW SHE'S 49 LBS. LIGHTER

If you are one who hears remarks from friends about "getting fat," you will naturally be interested to hear this woman's story. Fortunately, it had a happy ending. Here is her letter:—

"I had put on weight gradually—not noticing it myself—until my friends kept saying to me, 'Oh, you are getting fat.' I had myself weighed, and nearly had a fit. I was 178 lbs., and I am only 5 ft. 3½ ins. in height. Then I saw an advertisement for Kruschen, and I thought I would try it. I did so, and to-day I weigh 129 lbs., and feel better. I continue to take Kruschen, as I find it is still reducing me, and I wish to lose a little more weight. I am recommending Kruschen to all my friends."—(Mrs.) T. W.

Kruschen is an ideally balanced blend of six separate mineral salts. The formula represents the ingredient salts of the mineral waters of Carlsbad, Ems, Kissengen, and other well-known European spas, which have been resorted to for generations by the over-stout. Only in Kruschen can you get this precise combination of salts. The exact correctness of the formula of every batch of Kruschen is checked by a staff of qualified chemists, before it is passed for bottling.

Kruschen combats the cause of fat by assisting the internal organs to throw off each day those waste products and poisons which, if allowed to accumulate, will be converted by the body's chemistry into fatty tissue. Thus, Kruschen acts upon surplus fat only; if you have no excess fat to lose, you cannot lose weight with Kruschen.

Instead Of Dessert Try Sweets With The Coffee

By MARY E. DAGUE

Everybody loves a piece of candy occasionally, even persons who are dieting to reduce, so if there's no dessert for dinner, try serving a delightful sweet with the coffee.

A certain amount of sugar is necessary in the average normal dietary to maintain a balance of nutritive elements, and pure, home-made candy always is greeted with delight. And of all the types of candy, divinity, made light and delectable with egg whites, is one of the favorites. Also, it is less rich than the fudges and is ideal for the warm weather of early fall.

Sister Mary

Two cups granulated sugar, 2-3 cup water, 1-3 cup light corn syrup, whites 2 eggs, ¾ cup shredded coconut, ¾ cup thinkly sliced candied cherries, ½ teaspoon vanilla, few grains salt.

The easiest way to make this candy is to use two sauce pans. Put ½ cup sugar and 1-3 cup water in small sauce pan and cook until a few drops tested in cold water form a soft ball, or the thermometer registers 238 degrees F. Put remaining sugar, water and syrup in another sauce pan and cook until a few drops tested in cold water form a hard ball (252 degrees F.). Remove first syrup from fire, cool slightly and pour slowly over stiffly beaten whites of eggs, beating constantly until mixture begins to look dull. Then add second syrup slowly, beating as before. Beat until mixture loses its gloss and fold in prepared cherries, cocoanut and salt. Turn into a buttered pan and cool. When firm cut in small squares. Roll some of the squares in toasted cocoanut and leave some plain.

For a change, add coarsely chopped nuts in place of cocoanut. Another delicious innovation is to toast the cocoanut in a moderate oven before folding it into the candy.

Besides candy there are other festive-looking sweets that delight the family.

Chocolate cream roll, for instance, one of the easiest desserts to make, has all the effect of elaborateness. This may be served within an hour after making or it may ripen in the refrigerator for ten hours or longer. You simply spread chocolate wafers with sweetened whipped cream and pile them in a tall stack.

About sixteen wafers will be needed for a family of four. Two-thirds to three-fourths cup whipping cream will make enough cream after it is whipped to spread over the wafers and cover the tops and sides of the roll. When ready to serve cut in slices diagonally in order to show the layer effect. Ginger wafers can be used in place of chocolate for a spicier effect.

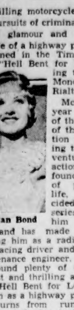
TWO PICTURE PROGRAM NOW SHOWS RIALTO

Thrilling motorcycle races, dashing pursuits of criminals and all the speed, glamour and adventure of the life of a highway patrolman, are contained in the Tim McCoy feature, "Hell Bent for Love," showing today and on Monday at the Rialto theatre.



Lilian Bond

McCoy, up to a year ago, was one of the best-known of the western action stars. Believing that more adventure and fast action could be found in stories of present day life, McCoy decided to star in a series presenting him in modern roles and has made productions starring him as a radio patrolman, auto racing driver and a telephone maintenance engineer. In each he has found plenty of opportunities for fast and thrilling action.

In "Hell Bent for Love" he will be seen as a highway patrol officer, who turns from running down speeders and other traffic violaters, to the more dangerous game of combatting the underworld.

Vincent Sherman, Lilian Bond and Bradley Page are his principal supporting players.

THE ADDED FEATURE

Love or duty . . . life in disgrace, or possible death of a hero . . . this forms the intriguing basis of the photoplay, "Happy Landing," the added feature.

The hero, Nick Terris, is a lieutenant with the border patrol and has compiled a good record while performing his dare-devil stunts in the air. Through unusual circumstances he is made an accomplice of a gang of bandits and when unable to offer a suitable explanation, he is forced to resign.

However, Janet, the daughter of the base-commander, sticks by him and although she is willing to accept him anyway, makes him risk his life to prove his innocence.

Terris is impersonated by Ray Walker, who strangely enough made his film debut for Monogram less than a year ago in an airplane picture, "Skyway." The feminine lead is capably handled by Jacqueline Wells, who was co-featured with Walker in Monogram's "Loudspeaker," and who was recently elected a Wampus baby star of 1934.

Carole Lombard, now working in "Now and Forever," who has her dressing room redecorated twice a year, is preparing to have it done over, this time in pale green.

Gary Sure Gets All The Breaks

Adventure Of Spanish Main Previews Cap

Wallace Beery

Jackie Cooper

Hailed as one of the grandest romantic dramas to be screened this year, Robert L. Stevenson's immortal adventure story, "Treasure Island," will be previewed at the Capitol theatre 15 minutes after midnight Sunday, starring Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper, Lionel Barrymore, Otto Kruger, Lewis Stone, Nigel Bruce, Charles "Chic" Sale and other Hollywood notables.

The producers have followed the original story with scrupulous care and the large and talented cast lend life and realism to the film, which unrolls in a thrilling and breathtaking pace.

Special street cars will be on hand after the show running to all parts of the city.

MYSTERY DRAMA OPENS EMPRESS

Gertrude Michael, attractive and talented actress, who has won distinction in a series of increasingly important film roles during the past year, soars to screen stardom by her portrait of a fascinating and beautiful adventuress in the title role of "The Notorious Sophie Lang," which comes to the Empress theatre on Monday for an engagement of three days.

Gertrude Michael

The story opens when a particularly daring robbery is accomplished in New York, by a woman who manages an ingenious escape. Inspector Parr of the New York police, played by Arthur Byron, concludes that it is the work of Sophie Lang. Playing a double game, he plans to use Maximillian Bernard, notorious English jewel thief, who is posing as Sir Nigel Crane, to trap her.

Sophie Lang, however, learns of the plot. Through a whirling maze of intrigue and counter-intrigue, Sophie and Bernard make several successful hauls, attempt to betray each other to the police, and wind up completely in love with each other, fleeing to England, while the baffled and amused Parr wires "condolences" to Scotland Yard.

In the supporting roles are Paul Cavanagh, as the sauve and debonair Bernard; Arthnr Byron, who renders a delightful characterization as the police chief; and those two grand comedians, Leon Erroll, of the wabbly legs, and Alison Skipworth, who renders another of her inimitable characterizations as a venerable and motherly scoundrel.

Princess Books Shirley Temple

Adolphe Menjou, Dorothy Dell, Charles Bickford and five-year-old Shirley Temple have the principal roles, while the supporting cast includes Lynne Overmann and Jack Sheehan, Broadway stage stars who make their Hollywood screen debut in this film, and Frank McGlynn, Sr., Sam Hardy, Tammany Young, Warren Hymer and Craufurd Kent.

A five-year-old girl is left with a bookmaker as an I.O.U. for a racing bet. When her father does not return, the bookmaker, a grouchy, penurious chap, adopts her.

The child immediately starts winning over the rowdy citizens of the racing racket, but when they suddenly realize that she is learning their rough ways and talk, they agree to an unusual masquerade to re-establish her childish innocence.

CHILD WONDER OF SCREEN AT CAPITOL TODAY

A new starring romantic team is presented to film audiences in "Now and Forever," opening a three-day engagement at the Capitol theatre today. It is Gary Cooper and Carole Lombard, and the picture marks the first time that these two popular players have appeared together as leads. In addition, five-year-old Shirley Temple, who was seen in "Little Miss Marker," plays a starring role.

Together, these three compose one of the most perfect combinations seen in films. The characters they play are sympathetic, human and entirely believable, and they enact a story that is sincere, with loads of heart-tugs and tears along with the smiles and laughs.

Plainly a born adventurer, Gary Cooper is seen as a carefree chap, who lives by his wits, and hoodwinks every man he meets. Madly in love with Carole Lombard he even permits his cheating methods to cheat her away from him.

His little daughter, Pennie, played by Shirley Temple, has been brought up by a guardian. Desperate for money, he even consents to accept cash for his right to his own daughter. That is, until he sees her.

Then he carries her away. Together with Carole Lombard they lead a happy, carefree life, until Cooper is again tempted to stray from the straight and narrow. At this point the child's love and faith in him is vindicated, when, by a noble deed of self-sacrifice, he removes himself from her life and makes happiness possible for her.

Sir Guy Standing, Charlotte Granville, Gilbert Emery and Henry Koker are also in the cast. "Now and Forever" was directed by Henry Hathaway.

INTIMATE GLIMPSES AND INSIDE STUFF ON THE MOVIE COLONY

By DAN THOMAS

It's the craze among Hollywood screen notables to wear wigs in films, as the beauties fancy themselves with hair different in color from that of their natural tresses. Here is Alice Faye, above, in all her ash blond charm and below with a brunet wig. But the studio hair experts declare that none of the actresses looks as well with a wig as naturally.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 1 — So eager are Hollywood's screen actresses to find out how they would look with different color hair that they will go to almost any extent to grab a role which will permit them to wear wigs.

The authority for this statement is Irene Beshon, hair expert at the Fox studio. And Miss Beshon should know, as it is her duty to take care of the transformations of the blonds who would be brunets and vice versa.

"I never yet have seen a girl who wasn't tickled to death over the prospect of wearing a wig in a picture, despite the discomfort of these transformations," declares Miss Beshon. "In fact, I have had many actresses come to me and ask to be fitted with wigs just to show their directors how well they would look with different color hair.

"A change in the color of their hair makes them look different all right, but I have yet to see one who looks as well as she does with her natural tresses. That's one of the things nature appears to have taken care of for us."

Alice Faye, naturally an ash blond, tried a black wig for her next role, but was ordered to discard it for her natural hair. By donning the same type of wig, Claire Trevor managed to grab her first dramatic role. But then she was ordered to enact it minus the wig.

Rochelle Hudson's green eyes were amazingly enhanced by a red wig, but it didn't look right against her olive skin, so the wig had to be discarded. And that's the way it goes. Some manage to get into pictures wearing wigs, but they never look as well as they do with their own hair.

A POSER FOR PAPA

LEE TRACY AT STRAND TODAY

Lee Tracy

Helen Morgan

Lee Tracy, fast-talking, wisecracking and flippant, conclusively proves his right to be considered as a first-rank dramatic actor by his performance in a human and thrilling drama, "You Belong to Me," which opened at the Strand theatre today.

Tracy plays the part of a drunken broken-down vaudeville cartoonist, without ambition, resigned to a ruined life. In spite of himself, he undergoes a regeneration to prevent the disillusionment of a young stage-child, portrayed by six-year-old David Holt, the newest juvenile sensation since Shirley Temple.

This little boy whose ease of acting and sincere emotional portrayal drew applause from the first-day audience promises to become one of the most important of the juvenile stars.

Helen Mack, Paramount's diminutive and dynamic actress protege, plays the role of stage actress-mother and gives to its portrayal all the benefit of her years of stage experience and of her talent.

Helen Morgan is cast as the singer-wife of Tracy, and in the role she renders a number of new songs by Sam Coslow, composer of "Cocktails for Two."

"QUINTS" REVEL IN NEW FREEDOM

CALLANDER, Ont., Sept. 1.—All five of the Dionne quintuplets were out of their incubator Friday and established in beds where they kicked and rolled with every manifestation of keen pleasure. They all had baths today also. It was the first time Emile and Marie, the two smallest girls, had been washed in water.

Dr. A. R. Dafoe, north country physician who attended Mrs. Oliva Dionne at the birth of her five daughters, said all the children were in the best of health and were beginning to show marked interest in their surroundings. He added the small tumor on the thigh of Marie, lightweight of the five, was improving.

Boland, Ruggles Star Dreamland

Miss Boland and Ruggles were starred together after the Paramount studio, which had featured them in three previous pictures—"The Night of June 13th," "Evenings for Sale," and "If I Had a Million"—found that audiences wanted more of the combination. The demand registered at theatres everywhere was so hearty, in fact, that "Mama Loves Papa" was written especially to suit their respective comedy talents.

Miss Boland and Ruggles are a middle-aged couple whose troubles begin when Miss Boland, filled with ideas of "culture" learned from popular lecturers, decides that her husband must wear formal dress on every possible occasion. When he goes to his office in a cutaway and striped pants, he starts a series of fateful events that cost him his job, cinch his selection to an important civic post, get him fired again and generally upset his and his wife's well-ordered life.

Bing Crosby chews gum all the time—having found a way to get it out of the way in the side of his mouth when he sings and speaks.

Edmonton Astrologer Explains Influence of Stars on Our Lives

The following is the first of a series of instructive articles dealing with the science of Astrology. Written simply by W. Mueller, late of Europe and now living in Edmonton, these weekly lessons will follow a definite sequence so that when the series concludes a fairly broad knowledge of the subject will be gained.

QUESTION: Do you really believe that there is something behind what they call Astrology?

ANSWER: Some people are of the opinion it's just bunk. Many people think so. They are all mistaken. Our first legislator, Moses, it is known, was highly educated and a master in Astrology. He erected the great observatory in the temple of the Sun at Heliopolis in Egypt. Since that time the greatest kings of the world have owed their success and wealth to advice received from their astrologers and, looking into our own English history, we learn that Charles I, Queen Elizabeth and Queen Anne maintained an astrologer on their payroll.

"Only he is wise, he knows the future," says an old proverb.

Charles I could have saved his head if he only had followed the advice given him by his advisors.

The famed William Lilly predicted the fire of London 15 years before. After the catastrophe he was summoned by the House of Commons to explain what had caused the blaze that destroyed London.

And so in your life, my friend, every important event can be determined long before, if you ask for advice or study yourself the influences of the planets and find when and how occurrences will happen.

QUESTION: I can't believe that these little lights in the sky are influencing me—is not everybody his own master?

ANSWER: Certainly; but only according to the forces around him which are impelling yet never compel. You are the captain of your body and decide what shall be done, but those little lights called stars are, in reality, electric sending stations and are much larger than you imagine.

The earth has a diameter of 7,913 miles and Jupiter, which can be seen every evening in the west has 88,390 miles. The moon, tracing its path around us, measures only 2,100 miles and the tiny Saturn 71,900 miles. The wonderful morning-star, Venus, has 7,510 and her mother, the Sun, 860,000 miles in diameter.

Your radio would be useless without a sending-station and on the other hand you could not live without the electric rays from the visible or invisible planets around the earth.

QUESTION: Well, then, I need some change in my system, because I am feeling pretty blue since last night.

ANSWER: Not only you, my friend, many other people also who are suffering under the square from Mars to Uranus in these days, just watch the papers and read of great disasters which have happened all over the world.

You are nothing else than a radio-receiver tuned on the day of birth, improved from father and mother and your teachers and refined only by your own endeavors. The finer you tune yourself the finer you respond to the power coming from even other planets as Uranus and Neptune. You can accept or refuse their influences and can transmute them into good or unfavorable actions, all according to your understanding and will.

Real Spooks Are Sought

Will Investigate Data Supplied by Spirit Mediums

The age-old endeavor to find a tangible, real dyed-in-the-wool "spook" is to be undertaken by a committee of distinguished scientists, philosophers and psychologists of the University of London which has been formed to investigate psychical phenomena.

This new committee, consisting of 12 members, will take over the work of the National Laboratory of Psychical Research, but it will not, however, be officially connected with the university.

Among the various "phenomena" to be investigated will be included telepathy, clairvoyance, automatic writing, psychometry (supernormal knowledge of the past history or associations of objects handled by a medium), poltergeists and other alleged mental and physical manifestations produced by so-called mediums.

Foreign correspondents for the committee, representing the United States, British Dominions and several other European countries, are to be chosen to aid in the gathering of data for the study.

The committee hopes to receive the aid of the general public in obtaining data for the investigations, members explaining that only with such co-operation will it be possible to elucidate those mysteries of the seance room which for nearly a century have been studied under the term "psychical research."

SCIENCE SIMPLIFIED

Hot Days—Cold Nights

Moon's Surface Has Extreme Temperatures

I CAN HARDLY WAIT TILL EVENING TO WEAR MY NEW FUR COAT

Would you like to live in a world where the days are equal to 14 of our own in length? Do you like hot days and cold nights?

Then this column advises a trip to the moon, for there you will find these conditions approximated.

The moon is closer to the earth than any other heavenly body, being only a matter of 239,000 miles distant. It is a much smaller body than the earth with a diameter of 2,160 miles and it accompanies the earth like a faithful watchdog on its annual journey around the sun.

NO ATMOSPHERE

In later articles we shall discuss the various theories on the formation of the moon. At this time we shall concentrate on surface conditions. It has been assumed for many years that the moon possesses neither atmosphere nor water and as a consequence life as we know it would not be possible. Science has determined that a body as small as the moon loses whatever atmosphere it has soon after its formation for the reason that its gravitational attraction is not sufficient to hold the molecules that go to make up the atmosphere which are travelling at tremendous rates of speed.

As to the temperatures on the moon it is generally agreed that during the long lunar night it becomes almost as cold as the cold of outer space. During the lunar day, unless rapid radiation prevents, the surface of the moon must become extremely warm, rising to far above the boiling point of water during the lunar noon and early afternoon. It must be borne in mind that the lunar day is equal to 14 of our own.

SCOUTS MAKE GOOD SHOWING DURING YEAR

Scout "Apple Days" were featured in 83 places in the Dominion and it is estimated that 324,000 persons were reminded of Canadian apples and the Scout movement by personal contact with smartly uniformed Scouts.

Of the ten Canadian Rhodes Scholars named last year, five were Scouts of several years' standing. This interesting fact draws attention to the close similarity in the "ideal young man" standards set by the two great leaders, Cecil Rhodes and Lord Baden-Powell. One of the five Scout Rhodes Scholars is R. L. D. "Buzz" Fenerty of the Tenth Calgary and graduate in law from University of Alberta.

During the last four years the Canadian Scout population has increased by 28.3 per cent. The total membership at the end of 1933 was 64,780, an increase of 2,500 over 1932.

The Scout Christmas toy shops are famous from coast to coast and a conservative estimate places the number of children remembered at over 80,000, including more than 9,000 located on prairie homesteads.

Scouting carries its cheerfulness and its ideal of service into the northernmost parts of Dominion. There are 633 Lone Scouts scattered over the Dominion. In this connection it is interesting to learn that the Canadian headquarters at Ottawa is co-operating with Imperial Headquarters in England and with the Canadian Radio Commission in obtaining messages from parents to be sent over the air to some 25 British Scouts apprenticed to the Hudson's Bay Company and located in the North.

During the visit of the famous British crack train, "The Royal Scot," Scouts of both Canada and the United States guarded it against damage by souvenir hunters. Railway officials were highly pleased with the way Scouts carried out this novel "good turn."

One of the keenest of Canadian Scouts is the Chief Scout himself, the Earl of Bessborough, who has kept constantly posted regarding the movement and its needs. He has studied Canadian Scout problems and from time to time has made suggestions for the future developing of Scouting in the Dominion. During the year His Excellency signed 641 warrants for Scout Leaders.

Lord Baden-Powell of Gilwell, Chief Scout of the world, who is expected to visit Edmonton next April, in complimenting Canadian Scouts on their fine achievements of the past year, said, in conclusion: "Let us not forget to render thankfulness to God for the success with which He has favored us, and to seek His help in our further effort to serve Him by bringing goodwill and happiness to our fellow-men through Scouting.

Boy Scouts Watch For Sea Monster

Now, they have roped in the Boy Scouts to keep a watch for the famous monster of Loch Ness.

Twenty-one boys of the Forty-fourth Glasgow troop are now at Dochgarroch, near the northern end of the loch. They are making periodic visits all around the loch in the hope of seeing the monster.

Other Glasgow troops are concentrating on the loch, for the scoutmasters regard the hunting of this famous monster as valuable practice in observation.

Cat Teaches Kittens Music Appreciation

A drug store cat wants her kittens to be musical. Judy, the mother cat, has chosen the high shelf next to the radio, which plays all day, as the home for her brood. The owner has tried in vain to move Judy and kittens to another part of the store.

WHY THEY ARE CALLED BOARDING HOUSES

"Board" is an old name for table—we still speak, for instance, of "the festive board." The term "boarding house" has therefore come to stand for an establishment where the visitors are expected to take their place at the board—or be fed—as distinct from, say, a hotel, where one may have just a bed and no food.

THAT'S TOO STRONG

These are times when a body has to think big. Like our favorite political philosopher, the late Uncle Joe Cannon. Uncle Joe was telling Chauncey M. Depew about a fish he had almost caught.

"About the size of a whale, wasn't it?" asked Mr. Depew, softly.

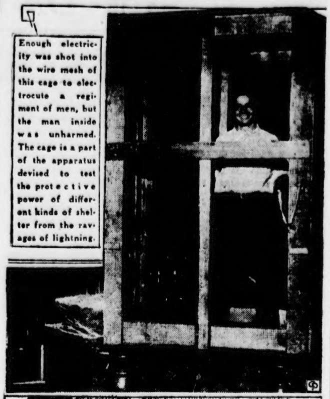
Laughs at Lightning



Enough electricity was shot into the wire mesh of this cage to electrocute a regiment of men, but the man inside was unharmed. The cage is a part of the apparatus devised to test the protective power of different kinds of shelter from the ravages of lightning.

Caught in an electrical storm, you have your choice of one of these shelters. Which would you select as the safest refuge?

Tin Barn Safest Refuge When Lightning Strikes

Charge of 200,000 Volts Leaves Writer Smiling in Cage

A mighty electrical charge of 200,000 volts sears the outside surface of a tall wire cage which rests upon insulators. Sudden and certain death is in store for anyone foolhardy enough to step within a circle of destruction five feet and more in any direction from the cage.

Yet within the structure, and literally surrounded by fiery walls of death, I stood in easy comfort, smiling at obserevs who peered at me from a distance of several yards by the sporadic light of blue flashes of miniature lightning.

Such is the newly demonstrated experimental answer to the question: "Where is the safest place to be in case of an electrical storm?"

BAFFLING

For centuries mystics, philosophers and scientists have wondered in awe at the terrific power of destruction of lightning from the skies. There was nothing like it in the world. None could really escape it. It was the consummation of all that was irresistible and unfathomable.

Gradually through the years science ground down the borders of ignorance which surrounded it. Scientists learned the nature of lightning, its causes, its effects, its beginnings and its end. They measured its power, its voltage, its length and its width. Then some practical-minded scientist happened along.

"If there were a storm and much lightning," he hypothesized, "and the only available shelters were a tall tree with many leaves, a wooden shed and a tin barn, which would be the safest refuge from the storm and lightning?" The practical-minded scientist wanted to make us of all science's theoretical knowledge of the lightning.

Most persons would almost instinctively eschew the tree, which is notoriously a "suker" for lightning. Looming far above the ground, it offers the most proximate point for the discharge of electrical energy from a highly charged cloud to the earth. The fact that it is pointed also explains why a tree is a favorite spot for an angry sky to unload its high potential charge, or more commonly, lightning. Lightning jumps easily from point to point, and with greater difficulty to a blunt surface.

TWO CHOICES

The choice then lay, for the scientists and others who considered the problem, between the tin barn and the wooden shed. At first study it would seem almost apparent that the wooden structure was the safer of the two. Dry wood is a fair insulator against electricity. But, of course, if the shed were struck directly by lightning, the shed's insulating properties would be of no avail against the irresistible surge of that tremendously volted charge that is lightning. Death and destruction would be almost inevitable to anyone in a wooden barn or shed if the barn were struck fairly and squarely by the lightning.

The last choice remains, then, the tin structure. True, tin is an excellent conductor of electricity. Lightning would be quick to strike it, if it struck anything. Anyone leaning against the outside of the tin structure would be burnt to a crisp, as by the electric chair. Anyone standing within several yards of the tin building at the time the structure received its charge of lightning would see a tremendous blue spark reaching for him like the finger of death, and then he, too, would be electrocuted.

For high potential or charge always seeks to flow in the direction of lower potential or charge. That is why electricity flows into the ground; that is why the finger of lightning from the charged tin building would reach out for the uncharged body of a person standing nearby.

But in the light of these facts, what would be the fate of the man standing inside the tin building? To answer this question scientists recalled the established fact that one part of an electrical charge usually acts as a shield against another part of that same charge. Each part of charge tries to get as far away as possible from the major portion of the charge. The result is that in a curved surface, all of which carries an electrical charge, the electricity will all be concentrated on the outside surface film of the structure. The inside surface will be as free from electrical charge as a plate of glass.

The electrical cage experiment was the result of the above reasoning. A wire cage was built here and placed upon insulators. Through this was sent coursing a current of electricity having a voltage approximating 200,000. Into this structure, carrying enough potential death for a regiment of soldiers, I walked.

SAFE AND SOUND

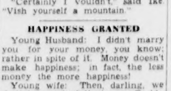
The "juice" was turned on. Sparks and purple-blue flashes of lightning flew from the cage to conducting objects in the immediate vicinity; coronas, phenomena signifying the presence of tremendous voltages, played around the structure like halos. Yet I stood there feeling no discomfort. The experiment was proved, and proved well. While death played on the outside surface of the cage, the electrical charge was repelled by itself from penetrating even the least distance inside the shelter. Afterwards, I stepped out of the cage, smiling.

So the answer to the scientist's query proved to be that the inside of the tin barn, or of any similar metal structure, is by far the safest place to be during an electrical storm.

MAKING SURE

"Let me see," said Lane pensively, "do I owe you any money, old man?"

Long raised inquiring eyebrows. "Not a penny, old chap," he replied. "Why, are you going round paying off your little debts?"



"Oh, no!" replied Lane quickly. "I was just going round to see if I've overlooked anybody. Lend me $5 till Saturday, will you?"

TIGHT—EVEN IN DREAMS

Two Jews went to the mountains on vacation. They took a tramp among the mountains.

"I vish," said one, "that I owned that tallest mountain over there and that it vas solid gold."

"That's a lovely thought," said the other. "Ike, if that mountain vas solid gold and you owned it, vould you give me part of it?"

"Certainly I vouldn't," said Ike. "Vish yourself a mountain."

HAPPINESS GRANTED

Young Husband: I didn't marry you for your money, you know; rather in spite of it. Money doesn't make happiness; in fact, the less money the more happiness!

Young wife: Then, darling, we shall be wonderfully happy. Daddy went bankrupt yesterday.

A LITTLE HELP

"Well, he's certainly done auntie justice in this portrait."

"My dear, it wasn't justice she wanted—it was mercy."

NEW BRIDGE WILL OCCUPY FAMOUS SITE

Waterloo Bridge Will be Sacrificed to Progress

News Item: Waterloo bridge loses the battle of London.

QUESTIONS

1.—What has happened to the famous Waterloo bridge?

2.—Who will design and who will pay for the new bridge to take its place?

3.—Who built Waterloo bridge?

4.—In what type of bridge construction was Rennie a pioneer?

5.—What does Waterloo bridge span?

6.—What did John Burns, the famous British labor leader, say of the Thames river?

7.—Who wrote the poem, "The Bridge of Sighs?"

8.—What is the oldest bridge across the Thames?

9.—Who designed and built the present London bridge?

ANSWERS

1.—It has been destroyed by order of the London county council to make way for a modern six-lane structure.

2.—London will pay the cost—approximately 6 and one-half million dollars—herself, without parliamentary aid, for the destruction of the old Waterloo bridge is in defience of the house of commons which has consistently objected to a new structure. The span will be designed by Sir Giles Gilbert Scott, who designed Liverpool cathedral when he was only 21 years of age.

3.—John Rennie, a Scottish engineer, who after engaging for some years in mill engineering, turned to the construction of bridges. His greatest work was Waterloo bridge, built 1811-17, by private enterprise, and sold to the metropolitan board of works in 1878.

4.—Semi-elliptical bridges. Waterloo bridge was of this type, having nine equal semi-elliptical arches of 120-foot span each. There is a legend that Rennie was only the engineer for the bridge, having derived its superb design from a broken-down architect in prison.

5.—The Thames river.

6.—When showing a party of Americans over the houses of parliament, and while stopping to look at the river, he said, "You have a Mississippi in America, and a St. Lawrence and they are bigger than this little stream. But let me tell you—the Thames is not a river. It is liquid history.

7.—Thomas Hood. It was written of Waterloo bridge and tells the story of a girl who, in despair, had thrown herself from it.

8.—London bridge. Until 1750 it was the only bridge across the river. Wooden piles, tiles and coins indicate that it was first built by the Romans. In 1209 the first stone London bridge was completed—it had houses built upon it, making it both a street and a bridge—and in 1921 an arch of the structure was revealed by excavation. For centuries London bridge has been built and rebuilt.

9.—John Rennie designed it, but it was built by his sons, one of whom was knighted upon its completion.

10.—The duke of Wellington, after whose great victory the bridge was named. The coin was preserved.

Delton Leads Soccer League

Delton Rovers are leading in the summer league of the Midget section of the junior division of the Edmonton and District Football League. The Delton team has won all seven games in which it has played. The final game in the play-off of this series for the Dr. Morrish cup will be played on September 7, probably at the Exhibition grounds. Delton will play the second top team, a position now held by the Alberta Avenue team.

Monument Planned To Indian Chief

A monument to the memory of Tecumseh, glamorous Indian chief who lead his braves in sanguinary raids on the early settlers of Michigan, is to be erected on Walpole Island, Ontario, in the Detroit river. Tecumseh was an ally of the British in the war of 1812.

WASN'T SURE

The genius of a local man had carried him to big success in business without much aid of education. He was asked to distribute the prizes at a school, and made the usual speech of good counsel.

"Now, boys," he said, "always remember that education is a great thing. There's nothing like education. Take arithmetic. Through education we learn that twice two make four, that twice six make twelve, that seven sevens make—And then there's geography."

LATE AGAIN!

They came all the way from Vancouver to run the mile in the Canadian schoolboys' trials held at Hamilton. This was too bad, because while the other boys were running, the Vancouver pair, A. Macauley and J. Schuberg, were in the dressing room. In other words, they were late for school.

Officials of trials, however, decided to let them run against time to show what they could do. Macauley won, but the time, 4.53.2 was 20 seconds slower than the 4.33 turned in by R. Mitchell, of North Toronto, in the regular event.

Late again!

Boys' Parliament to Hold Special Session; Plan Many Confabs

Holding a cabinet meeting at Kasota Beach, Sylvan Lake during the summer holidays, members of the ministry of the Alberta Boys' Parliament discussed important plans for the Tuxis-Trail Ranger fall program. Don Menzies, premier, acted as chairman, and Rev. R. W. Hibbert, secretary of the Alberta Boys' Work Board, was present.

That the fall program of Tuxis should feature a series of conferences, was the opinon of the cabinet. These conferences should begin at the first of October and continue through till the middle of that month, and they should prove a valuable medium for preparing the way for the 1934 parliament. They should aim at giving vitalized information, inspiration, challenge and fun.

The suggestion was made that a "question box" be conducted, one for Trail Rangers and one for Tuxis, with separate meetings to talk over the various questions arising in group work.

It was also suggested that the Boys' Work Board be asked to lay special emphasis on Tuxis work in localities that are at present unoccupied by any boys' organization and that commissioners be appointed to act on behalf of the board in these areas who would utilize the Parliament members in this district for this purpose. In this way the cabinet hopes to make a considerable enlargement in the Alberta scope of the Tuxis movement.

The cabinet appointed N. Cameron, member for Calgary, to act as Deputy-Minister of organization to assist D. McLaren of Viking. Cameron's duties will be largely in connection with parliamentary elections.

In discussion of parliament organization it was recommended that in future a cabinet minister with portfolio should retain his seat the following year in the capacity of minister without portfolio. In this way important advice from an experienced minister could be given to the new cabinet.

Suggested improvements in Tuxis publications and methods of financing were also discussed by the cabinet.

It was decided to hold the fall meeting of the cabinet at Camp Tuxis, in Harold Mann's cottage, during the week-end of October 6-8. The purpose of this meeting will be to discuss final plans for the 1934 parliament. Charles Hurst, F. Flummerfelt and Gordon Finlay were among those present at the meeting.

AN ANNUAL THING

"Did she tell you she was 19 in December?"

"Yes, and the December before that."

GETTING IN TROUBLE

Young Man: Mr. Smith, your daughter has promised to be my wife.

Mr. Smith: It was your own fault—what else did you expect if you kept hanging around here every night?

"One o fmy girl friends is here at the beach looking for her husband."

"What's his name?"

Boys Win in Air Contest

Model Airplane Builders Display Flying Sticks at Toronto

Boys from Canada's middle west and the Pacific coast triumphed in several divisions of the Canadian National Exhibition model airplane contest held in Toronto.

First place in the Wakefield contest, open, went to Fred Hollingsworth of Vancouver. Leonard Fisher was fourth. Arthur May of Winnipeg was winner of the outdoor scale model senior event.

Cyrus Thornton, of Akron, O., was first in the flying stick event, and Ted Booth of Rosslyn South was fourth.

Cyrus Thornton of Akron, O., was first in the gasoline model contest.

Know Your World

CONSTANTINE

Hotel in Constantine

View of Constantine, Algeria

DESCRIPTIVE — Constantine, scene of recent riots between Jews and Arabs in which more than 100 were killed, is capital of Constantine, one of the three departments into which Algeria is politically divided. It is situated on a precipitous hill with a flat summit, two sides of which are washed by the Rummel, flowing through a deep and narrow ravine. The population is 104,902, representing a growth of some 50,000 since 1901.

HISTORICAL—The city, named after the famous Roman emperor, was one of the important towns of ancient Numidia. In the wars of Maxentius against Alexander, about 311 A.D., Constantine was destroyed. It was rebuilt by Constantine the Great in 313. The city flourished in the twelfth century, trading with Venice, Genoa and Pisa. The French captured it in 1837, and it now is a French colonial possession. The spark that started the recent riots, according to officials, was a Jewish-French soldier's decoration of a mosque, after which Musselmen ran through the Jewish quarter attacking inhabitants.

COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY—Constantine is a centre of the leather industry. Woollens are manufactured, and there is considerable grain trade with Tunis. Trade of Algeria and Tunisia with the United States reached a value of $10,848,953 in 1929, but in 1932 had dropped to $2,719,705.

POINTS OF INTEREST—The city is a natural citadel, 830 feet above the river and 2,162 feet above sea level. It is surrounded by walls of Roman sculptured stones, built by the Arabs. The chief ancient buildings are the Kasba, or citadel; the palace of the Bey; the harem of Salah, and three mosques. One of these mosques, which dates to 1143, is now the Christian Church of Notre Dame des Sept. Douleurs. The older portion of the town is Moorish.

Idealism, Realism Combined In Fact Finding Science

"Now, some of the supposedly strongest institutions in the larger cities were unable to pay off their depositors and moratoriums were being declared in State after State.

"On the day of President Roosevelt's inauguration, banking was temporarily suspended almost everywhere, and the first act of the new president was to order every bank in the nation closed.

"One might have supposed that this would have thrown the nation into panic, but it had the opposite effect, for it was in that moment that the New Deal was really born.

CHAPTER ENDED

"In that moment, all America seemed to realize that a chapter of American history had ended. There was no suggestion that we had tried the Republican way of doing things and were now going to try the Democratic party's way.

"The feeling was, rather, that we were through with the old way, which Republicans and Democrats had both supported, and were now entering upon a wholly new course.

"What the course would be few were prepared to guess; but the fact that we were off the old road and must now go somewhere appealed to the American spirit.

"Other nations have had this same experience when a new leader has suddenly appeared; and if, in that moment, President Roosevelt had declared himself a dictator, he would doubtless have achieved a great and enthusiastic following.

"But he did something far wiser and far more effective. He took the whole nation into his confidence and admitted, over the radio, that he did not know what to do.

"The time had come, he said in effect, for the American people to find out what to do instead of blindly following political and economic precedents. His counsellors, it became apparent, were not politicians.

"Americans generally were disgusted with politicians and longed for an opportunity to escape from a system under which government had largely become a matter of political manipulation. Nor were they the great heads of corporations to whom the nation had formerly looked for economic wisdom.

"They were scientists, rather—men of research recruited largely from the faculties of our universities—to whom the journalists referred to as the President's 'brain trust.'

"And Americans generally—Republicans and Democrats — rather liked that. They liked the idea of having brains in their government, in place of oratory and political ambition, especially if the brains did not know everything to start with but were willing to find out what remedies to apply.

"And they liked it especially when the President, instead of trying to usurp authority, asked the American people to decide whether, in this emergency, they wanted him or Congress to become their leader.

"Officially he asked Congress to delegate certain emergency powers to him. But he did not stop with that. He could not order Congress to do any such thing. In some countries, to be sure, dictators have done just that, and if a dictator can control the army and navy it can be done. The New Deal in America, however, can not be accounted for in any such way.

"In America there was no political revolution. It was a scientific revolution. It was a revolution made possible very largely by that recent scientific development — radio.

POWER OF VOTERS

"There was a power in America before which all Congressmen quailed. That was the power of the voters in their respective districts.

"In ordinary times, however, the politicians in each district, who played politics the year around, were usually able to control the voters who took up politics, as a rule, for a short period before election.

"Even though a Congressman knew nothing about national issues that did not disqualify him for Congress.

"It might qualify him, for he could secure his election, often, by special promises to certain constituents to get them special favors, whereas a Congressman who was principally interested in the welfare of the whole nation would not have the time to play the kind of politics by which these special favors could be secured.

"But these were not ordinary times, and the voters of every district knew that they were not ordinary times. Unemployment was not a local issue. The finan-local; and these district-minded politicians were hardly the leaders which the voters of those districts wanted now.

"In former days, to be sure, they might have looked to their Congressmen for information as to what was really happening in Washington. With the radio in their homes, however, and with President Roosevelt talking intimately to them, they often knew more about what was happening in Washington than their own Congressmen seemed to know.

ASKED THE PEOPLE

"When President Roosevelt asked Congress for this emergency authority, then, he did not depend upon how the Congressmen might feel. He asked the American people how they felt about it; and it was the American people, not the President, who really told their Congressmen what to do.

"To refer to President Roosevelt as a dictator is to misunderstand the whole story; for not only has he followed the Constitution literally but he has enabled the people to dictate to their politicians in a way which never seemed quite possible before.

"Before Roosevelt's election, millions of Americans were becoming quite discouraged with democracy. They did not wish to give it up; but it had become a matter of common observation that the politicians, not the people really ruled.

"The only alternative, however, had seemed to be to hold mass-meetings and to arouse the citizens to action against the course of their elected leaders; and there were two reasons why such a course did not seem feasible.

"In the first place, people can not think their problems through in a mass meeting. The best they can do is to elect some leader to be their representative, and the leaders so elected in the excitement of a mass-meeting are quite likely to be the same type of self-seeking politicians against whose rule the masses have become aroused.

EMERGENCY OF 1933

"Nor have they ever dared before to delegate extraordinary powers to their chief executive, excepting in war. Their whole theory of government has been opposed to this; and while the emergency of 1933 was such that they might temporarily have endorsed any course which the President might suggest, an ever-growing minority would surely have viewed the course of any dictator with suspicion.

"When President Roosevelt suggested a course of government-by-fact-finding, however, to replace the old habit of government-by-opinion, he won the confidence of the rank and file of both the Republican and Democratic parties.

"What the masses really wanted, obviously, was not some particular answer but the correct answer to their present problem. They didn't know the answer; but if the problem were studied in a fact-finding way, instead of being debated by opinionated orators, there was a promise at least that a solution might be found.

NOT BLIND FOLLOWERS

"That was the spirit in which Americans began to follow Roosevelt. They have not followed him blindly. They have not followed him as they might follow a popular hero, only to turn against him at his first mis-step.

"He appealed, not merely to their idealism but to their realism. He was a leader who admitted that he could make mistakes, but promised to abandon any experiment, and try something else, whenever it become apparent that the experiment not work.

"Instead of setting up a censorship, then, he invited criticism; and never in American history have we had more free speech.

"But the movement toward democracy did not end with that. Democracy under fact-finding has come to mean more than political democracy. Under fact-finding, Democracy is at last becoming a fact, not merely in American politics, but in American life.

"This does not mean socialism. There is nothing socialistic in the New Deal. It does not mean bureaucracy or the administration of industry by the political state. It does mean the recognition, however, of everybody's right to participate in the economic system upon which everybody must depend for a living.

"The most typical and most dramatic feature of the Rooseveltian New Deal has been the National Recovery Administration, usually known as the N.R.A.

"The N.R.A. is so utterly contrary to a certain fixed American tradition that, had it been proposed by Mr. Roosevelt during his campaign for the Presidency, Mr. Roosevelt could not possibly have been elected.

"This tradition, however, which was so generally accepted by Americans both rich and poor, was not a tradition of Democracy. It was a tradition, in fact, which had done more than anything else to keep Democracy from being realized.

"It was the tradition of rugged individualism—the mental picture of human society not as a human society but as an arena in which it was everybody's individual business to fight his way to the top, and somehow get ahead of everybody else.

"Of course, there never was any such human society, even our first settlers were not and could not be ruggedly individualistic. They were colonists and each had to act with regard to the welfare of the colony. Later we became a nation and had to act with reference to the nation's welfare. Otherwise we could never have had any liberty or any democracy.

NOT INDIVIDUALISTIC

"Even as farmers, we could not be ruggedly individualistic; for farms were operated, not by individuals but by families, and each member of the family had to act with reference to the welfare of every other member.

"In the development of our factories, however, there seemed to be no social order to which it was necessary to acknowledge responsibility.

"In our private business adventures, we could not visualize any social scheme; and as long as the masses made their living by independent farming, and industries were being launched rapidly enough to keep the ever-increasing population of wage-workers regularly employed, there was no imperative necessity that we should.

"When we had built up the factory system, however, to a point where the masses everywhere became dependent upon it being kept in operation, it did become imperative to achieve some social vision, and Americans paid a great penalty for their failure to achieve it.

"To be sure, we achieved prosperity; but at its best it was prosperity without security. It was a tense, nervous, speculating prosperity; and it crashed at last, as it was inevitable that it must, into the great depression.

SOCIAL IRRESPONSIBILITY

"Incidentally, the social irresponsibility which we fondly called sugged individualism all but robbed us of the democracy which we had once enjoyed.

"There can be no real democracy where the masses are denied access to the means of production of wealth; and while our political institutions still survived, and we still went through the motions of democracy, it became more and more apparent that the business speculators, not the people, were the real rulers of America, and that our so-called democracy was largely an empty shell.

"This was not and could not be good government; for it was lacking in the first essential of good government, which is social responsibility. In the end, moreover, it turned out that it was not good business.

"America had sunk into poverty, and was sinking year by year into deeper poverty, not because of any scarcity of the good things of life but because these things could now be produced so efficiently and so abundantly.

"Only fact-finding, however, could solve the problem; and the President, working with his so-called brain trust, worked out a plan to get buying power into the hands of the masses, so that they could purchase enough to satisfy their wants, to keep the wheels of industry going and to keep themselves employed at sufficiently high wages so that they could continue to have sufficient buying-power.

PRINCIPLE OF NRA

"If this were to be done, however, business and industry would have to desert the path of social irresponsibility. That was the elemental principle of the National Industrial Recovery Act which authorized the NRA.

"It was a principle which the average Congressman was in no position to understand, and which the average American voter could not understand; and if democracy had continued to be merely an expression of traditional opinions, the NRA could not have happened without a political revolution.

"Democracy under fact-finding, however, pointed the way—the recognition by the masses that the problem was a problem which could be solved only by fact-finding, and their notifying their Congressmen to give the President authority to act upon his findings.

"Not that they understood the Industrial Recovery Act. They did not even know what its provisions were, and neither did many of the Congressmen who voted for its passage. They did not even know that the act, instead of limiting democracy, would extend democracy into the affairs with which they were most concerned.

"If there had not been such a complete financial collapse, such a revolutionary change could not have happened excepting by political revolution. American business, however, had about reached the end of its rope. It had nothing to suggest as yet.

"At this point, however, there was considerable confusion. The avowed purpose of the NRA was to 'increase prices'; and, in one sense an increased price was probably necessary for certain industries. With the collapse of the market through unemployment and the practical withdrawal of fifteen million breadwinners and their dependents from the role of regular customers, some industries and many farms were offering their products for less than the cost of production.

"Obviously, this could not continue indefinitely. Such business men must necessarily go out of business; and if such farmers continued to farm, they must quit trying to raise food for the market and resort to the ancient system of self-contained farming, raising what they could for their own consumption and going without whatever they could not produce.

FALLACY OF RAISED PRICES

"Many business men, therefore, thought of the NRA as an opportunity for them to raise prices to some level which would insure profits without price competition. With their competitors all bound to the same code, they reasoned, they would not be undersold, and their business troubles would about be over.

"Nothing in their business training enabled them to see the fundamental fallacy of such a course.

"The first necessity was that every industry in the nation be brought under a code; and the first necessity in each code was the raising of wages and the shortening of the workday for all employees.

This, however, was not a mere Presidential decree. It was decreed by economic law—now that machine industry had become the economic system upon which everybody depended for his very life.

"In no other way than by the shortening of the workday could more millions be immediately employed, and thus receive the buying power which it was necessary that they should have if business hoped to increase its sales and industry its production. And by no other way than by the raising of wages could the employed be enabled to increase their buying and thus provide the greater market which industry had to have.

Raising prices on such a basis would not increase mass buying-power and could not result in a larger market; whereas a larger market would reduce their overhead and might make their present prices profitable.

"Raising prices, moreover, would offset any disadvantages which might be secured from raising wages; for the wage-workers with their higher wages could buy no more than before.

"In spite of the fact, then, that one object of the NRA was to guarantee profitable prices to business, in place of the existing unprofitable prices, it soon became obvious that these profitable prices could not be arrived at by any agreement to abolish competition and fix a monopoly price.

"Nor could anything but harm come to business from such a course; for the price so fixed must be a price which the most inefficient units of each industry would find profitable; and with inefficiency setting the pace for industry, the mass consumer could not possibly be well served.

IN TERMS OF HUMAN LIFE

"Largely due to the administration's gold policy, higher commodity prices were achieved. They were higher, however, only when reckoned in dollars. When reckoned in terms of human life, as real prices must be reckoned, they were generally lower than before.

"When the masses had little or no buying-power, even those prices which were below the cost of production, and therefore wholly unprofitable to the producer, were still high enough to be beyond the mass consumer's reach.

"In spite of the confusing terminology, then, the real object of the NRA was and must have been to bring the products of industry within the reach of the masses; and if prices were raised as wages were raised, this could not have been achieved.

"To the extent that American business men began to understand this principle, the NRA became immediately successful. To the extent that they failed to understand it, recovery lagged. The codes, however, were rushed.

"It was necessary, as someone put it, to harness the industrial horse before it could be driven to market; and even if American business did not entirely understand what it was doing when it consented to the harnessing, the harness was nevertheless on.

QUESTION OF WAGES

"As to what wages should be paid, no one could say. Obviously, however, they had to be higher than they had been, even though the industries paying them were not yet profitable; for only sufficient mass-buying could make them profitable.

"Lacking any other way of discovering how high a wage would meet the economic needs of busines as well as the economic needs of the country at large, it was arranged in every code that wages should be agreed upon by collective bargaining.

"Here was an extension of democracy for which a great many American business men were not prepared, and it marks one of the striking differences between the American New Deal and Fascism.

"Under Fascist dictatorship, all democrotic institutions must fall, but the first marked for slaughter are usually the labor unions.

"Under the American New Deal, the labor unions were called to play a most important part in the industrial government of the nation.

"Yes, there were misunderstandings and strikes. Many of the labor unions had been organized to fight the employers, just as many employers had organized to fight the unions.

"The traditions of the old class struggle hung to both types of organization; and to expect them now to co-operate for the common good, without a great deal of suspicion and a great deal of misunderstanding on both sides, would be to indulge in unreasonable expectations.

"But democracy, after all, is an adventure rather than a formula. It is something to be achieved by practice; and one of the greatest victories of the New Deal was in the relatively little labor trouble which was not amicably adjusted before strikes were called.

"The New Deal, of course, included many other things besides the NRA, and it must include many adventures which have not yet been launched.

"It included the setting up of an agricultural administration, a task more difficult in many ways than the harnessing of industry.

"It also included a gigantic program for public works, an emergency employment program in co-operation with states and municipalities, a program for relief of home-owners who could not meet their mortgage payments, and a long list of financial reforms which required Congressional action along the lines indicated, whether the Congressmen could comprehend the necessity for each specific bill or not."

How Did "Heartless" Get His Picture On New 3-Cent Stamps?

If It's Not "Heartless Harold" It Should Be, Declare Alberta Undertaker's Large Following.

Has some artist with an eye to typical manly beauty picked "Heartless Harold" McMasters to represent one of the daring adventurers who came to Canada with Jacques Cartier 400 years ago?

Admirers of the man-mangling monster and deadly boxer who are also stamp-collectors think so, because one of the figures shown in the new three-cent Cartier commemorative stamp, is undoubtedly the old slugger in person.

Several things induce McMasters' large following to believe this—the man is a fine figure of a man—none other than "Heartless," they say—with the eagle gaze, the noble mien, the bulging biceps, and the dauntless look of the old maestro who has been knocked down so often, but never killed, in Alberta rings.

CLINCHING CLUE

Another clinching clue is the medieval garb worn by the heroic figure in the group around the leader—and is not "Heartless" noted for the strange garb in which he frequently struts the streets of Edmonton amid soft cries of hero-worship from feminine admirers.

But the final factor which definitely stamps Heartless as being one of the central figures in group, is the fact that the burly seaman kneeling at Cartier's side and peering earnestly into the distance, has an indubitable, unmistakable, absolutely positive peach of a cauliflower ear. The ear is such a big one, in fact, that it can be positively seen by the naked eye; under a magnifying glass, one is left without any doubt that the ear absolutely is a replica of one worn by "Heartless"—a badge of honor as a result of his many brawls with gents who were foolish enough to think they would survive the encounter.

It was the eagle eye of F. R. Surry, stamp-collector, who first noted the so-different ear in the stamp, and he immediately went into conference with Daniel Lynch, Esq., "Heartless Harold's" manager. Mr. Lynch admitted that Harold was the only other living human who had an ear like that.

CAN SEE TEETH MARKS

"Why, you can even see the teeth marks around the rim where "Heartless" bites himself when he is mad!" Mr. Lynch excitedly pointed out.

Mr. Surry says that only some of the new 3-cent stamps have the cauliflower eared man, and this freak—of engraving, no slur on the old man-killer—enhances the value of the stamp.

"Heartless Harold" was coy and blushed modestly when asked about the matter.

"If they just seen that small one on the stamp, they ain't seen nuttin' yet," the old mangler said in a whisper that sent dogs howling down the street with their tails between their legs.

"All I gotta say is dis—anyone that can get my mug for t'ree cents is gettin' a bargain, but I guess there will be quite a rush on them there new stamps now—the skoits will buy 'em by the gross and paper their rooms wid dem."

U.S. Loan Goes Far Over Mark

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 — Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau last night announced an offering of $75,000,000 in 182-day United States treasury bills had been oversubscribed nearly five times. VANCOUVER TESTS NEW LIGHTING

VANCOUVER, Sept. 1 — For the past few months Vancouver has been experimenting with an entirely new light source which has met with considerable success in England. This is the General Electric high-pressure mercury vapour lamp. Vancouver has been trying out a number of these new lamps to ascertain their suitability for street lighting.

The mercury vapour lamps, supplied by the General Electric Co. Ltd., consume 400 watts which is equal in efficiency to about a 750-watt mazda lamp. The light emitted is bluish in color, giving an acuity of vision said to be unequalled by incandescent filament lamps.

The increased efficiency of these new lamps has made it possible to illuminate city streets with a brilliancy and economy of current consumption unapproached by the older system. Glare has been reduced to a minimum and the new lamps are less susceptible to vibration than ordinary gas-filled lamps owing to the fact that they carry no filament.

CITY PREPARES FOR LAST OUTDOOR HOLIDAY OF SEASON

Edmonton Bulletin
AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER IN PUBLIC SERVICE

Citizens Choose Favored Pastime, Weatherman Kind

Opening of Duck Season in North, Many Sports, Resort Spots, Beckon Folk Hunting Recreation.

Edmontonians on Saturday geared up to celebrate the long Labor Day week-end, the last of the summer out-door holidays, when highways and byways lead to favored lakes or other recreation spots where a last look is taken at the little old summer cottage before boarding it up for the winter.

With the Weather Men—beg pardon, Weather Lady—predicting fair and cool weather after the rain of the last two days the prospect of a clear couple of days proved most intriguing and many motor cars were seen heading toward the favorite lakes.

Northern trails were heavily travelled, as the duck hunting season opened in the territory north of the Athabasca river this morning. Nimrods in large numbers were seen heading north with plentiful supplies of shells and other paraphernalia of the hunt.

LONG DRIVE NORTH

While it's a long drive to north of the Athabasca, the nimrods will be banging away at the elusive birds and will be hopeful of large bags.

Other visitors to the country will be indulging in boating, fishing and acquatic sports, while for the evenings, dancing pavilions will be in operation.

Within the city there has been drafted a comprehensive program of widely-varied attractions. The theatres have billed special feature pictures and doubeless will be attended by large numbers.

The sport world will be whirling with activity.

An outstanding feature will be the visit on Monday and Tuesday of the touring Toronto cricket team which will play a selected team of Edmonton All-Stars at the municipal links cricket pitch.

For the baseball fans there will be a choice morsel in the fifth and final game between Shastas and Wetaskiwin at Renfrew Park in the Northern Alberta semi-final. The teams are all-square at two games each. Manager Murray Murdoch will probably send "Big Herm" Loblick, the Stony Plain agrarian, to the hillock to do mound duty, while Wetaskiwin will doubtless bank all on Chief Jimmy Rattlesnake, the Indian smoke-ball artist from Hobbema, who has already set down Shastas twice.

Golfers will centre their interest on the Municipal Golf Club tournament which starts on Sunday with a large entry list.

TITLE GAMES

Grits and Safeways will stage the fourth game of the city junior baseball championship series at Boyle street at 2 p.m. on Sunday.

Adherents of softball will have a chance to indulge in their favorite game when Calgary "Toronto Stars" tangle with the "Rite Spot Beavers" for the provincial intermediate league title, playing one game on Sunday and two on Monday at Boyle street. These teams have won the southern and northern playdowns respectively.

The open lawn bowling tournament will be held at the Garneau club, with various competitions at the Edmonton, Patricia, Alberta avenue and other clubs.

Various tennis clubs will be staging round-robin and club events.

U.S. STRIKERS DECLARE WAR UPON "REDS"

Communist Agitators Make Bid for Power in Textile Impasse

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1—Strike leaders, approaching the zero hour beyond which they say "not a wheel shall turn" in some 1,500 cotton, wool and worsted mills, declared war today on what they called a Communist bid for power among the workers. From Francis J. Gorman, head of the strike committee came word that communist agitators are entering the conflict. He said they would be fought to the limit.

The hour for the strike is 11.30 tonight. The real test of the union's strength in the northeast will come Tuesday, the next working day. In the south—where many factories do not observe the Labor Day holiday—it will start 24 hours earlier.

The union declares some 425,000 cotton operatives and 100,000 wool and worsted workers—some of them now unemployed—will "be on the strike lines." The employers say not more than 15 per cent will be involved.

There appeared no hope today of averting the vast walkout—and union leaders were expected to throw more light today on the question whether the conflict would spread to the silk and rayon industry, with its 200,000 workers. The strike leaders have said it would unless demands were met. However, Peter Van Horn, chairman of the silk code authority, arranged to talk things over with Gorman. It was the refusal of Arthur Besse, chairman of the wool code authority, to have manufacturesr meet the union heads that preceded the strike call to the wool workers yesterday.

Bomb Explodes On Cuba Street

PALMA SORIANO, Cuba, Sept. 1—A bomb exploded at a mid-town street corner here Friday and caused a panic.

Ten political leaders were arrested in connection with the fire which yesterday burned down a large section of this town. The leaders were accused of terrorism.

Gleaned From Today's News

A meeting of the trustees of the Edmonton School Board will be held in the Board rooms, Civic block, Tuesday, September 4, at 8 p.m.

H. Brownlee, of Gramania district, reports that his barley crop which is of a high grade, has been cut and threshed already, and yielded around 50 bushels to the acre. This is considered a new record for the district.

The subject for Sunday night's Open Forum of the Unemployed Married Men's Association in the Albion hall, will be 'Is Relief the Real Burden of Taxation?" Representatives of the City Taxpayers' Association will be present.

A further call for men to work on the Jasper-Banff highway project is expected by H. F. McKee, manager of the special relief department. The quota from the city has been filled, and a large list of men are waiting anxiously for a chance to proceed to Jasper on this work, he said.

Wheat yields in the Shandro, Willington and Andrew districts have been lower from five to six bushels to the acre through frost and rain damage, according to Andrew Shandro, prominent farmer of the Shandro district, who is a business visitor in Edmonton. He also estimated that at least two grades will be lost through damage to the wheat crop.

Joe Fairley, manager of the Canadian Legion, expressed the opinion that a large increase in membership would follow the visit of General Ross. Plans for a membership drive will be discussed subsequent to that visit, he said, but added that he hoped the returned soldiers of Edmonton would rally to the support of the legion, and that a drive for members would not be necessary.

Business tax payments flooded the assessor's office Saturday morning as business men hatened to pay their levy before the expiration of the due collection date. On Friday business tax collections amounted to $36,000 with land taxes totalling $5,700 being paid. It is anticipated that business taxes paid on Saturday will run well over the $100,000 mark.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

With Edmonton more or less remote from the main centres of population on the continent and admittedly not a holiday resort, do you figure tourist traffic to be a benefit or a detriment to the city? Do more of our citizens leave to spend money in other centres during the holiday season than inhabitants of other places come here with their vacation cash?

BILL J. BRUNLESS of the Borden Park Service Station: "I think it's about a 50-50 break, with Edmonton gaining a little more each year on the tourists. The city at present is just a stopping off place for most motorists from other points. You do not begin to know the volume of cars from outside points 'till you stand in front of a station such as this."

• • •

REG. MOON, bookkeeper: "The tourist business and holiday season is a dead loss to Edmonton every year. Where hundreds may come to the city to spend their vacation money, thousands of our citizens leave."

• • •

J. A. McNEIL of the Alberta Motor Association: "The tourist traffic is a great benefit to the city and the biggest advertising medium we have. A tourist who is accommodated, pleased and satisfied with a holiday here, be it only a two day stop-over, is a salesman for Edmonton when he gets back home. Last year, 12,000 people in 4,400 cars registered at the auto camp, and that means cash in the tills of Edmonton merchants."

• • •

LES. R. NICHOLLS, salesman: "It's a losing proposition ever year for this city. For every dollar brought in by tourists from other points, there's a hundred taken out by our own citizens. Most people save for their holidays, that is, make the money here, and then go other places to spend it. We may begin to get something like an even break when the road to Jasper Park can be traversed in high gear."

• • •

STAN PEARSON, auto mechanic: "From what I've seen and heard at the garage here, Edmonton is a sore point with the big monied tourists from the U. S, who go to Jasper. The roads up here get 'em on edge, the cool, rainy weather isn't any too pleasing, and what they call the high price of gas finishes off their displeasure. Edmonton gains nothing in the holiday months."

SAAR GERMANS BEING TAUGHT USE OF ARMS

GENVEA, Sept. 1. — Charges that 16,000 Germans residing in the Saar region receiving military training in Germany preparatory to their dispatch into the Saar on the occasion of the plebiscite next January were made by the League of Nations Saar Governing Commission today.

The commission communicated with the home office of the League, saying it had discovered documentary proof of these charges by a seizure of papers from the office of the voluntary labor service of the German front organization in the Saar.

The commission said it deemed the situation so grave that it has drafted an ordinance banning the voluntary labor organization from the Saar and compelling the youths enrolled to report to the police in order that they may be placed under surveillance.

The commission said that the documents proved the German front is "maintaining constant relations with the authorities of the reich and promoting their interference in Saar affairs."

Irishman Plans Trip To Arctic

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 1.—Francis Kennedy Pease, an Irishman, sailed Friday for Canada on his way to seek further relics of the Franklin expedition which was lost in the Arctic in 1847.

"I have an even chance of cheating death," he remarked as he left, accompanied by only a fox terrier. He is travelling alone because he thinks he can surmount the difficulties of the trip better than with a companion.

MILD SELLING FLURRY SENDS WHEAT LOWER

Broomhall

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—During the month of Aug. Liverpool and B. A. markets have advanced sharply in spite of the heavy Canadian marketings which held Winnipeg in check and in fact caused a considerable decline.

The demand for wheat in the U. K. is remarkably slow, but bids for amber durums are very keen and offerings have advanced considerably.

The U. S. is still enquiring for Canadian durums, barley and rye. Liverpool reported the purchase of No. 1 Manitobas from the Atlantic, Sept. shipment, at 3 1-3 and No. 2 Manitobas from Vancouver afloat at 30¼-½.

Total shipments from Australia and the Argentine this week were 4,017,000 bushels, compared to 6,539,000 a week ago. Practically all the Australian shipments went to non-European countries this week.

The Australian Premier has announced that there will be no forced selling of wheat. The new crop is backward in the eastern states, but rains benefitted the crops in the west this week.

Whitney Letter

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—At yesterday's session trading activity was on a reduced scale as compared with the previous day. The price swings were exceptionally small, with the possible exception of U. S. Smelting, nothing in particular happened on the upside and with the exception of the dumping of some Nat'l Dairy Prods. and Pathe "A" nothing particularly noticeable happened on the downside.

There was no evidence of any urgent selling pressure developing and on the other hand there was evidence that the buying power anticipated was ready and willing to go to work when prices receded. That it did not go to work in an aggressive manner is very easily explainable by the Monday holiday and the textile strike news.

As for today I look for one of two things to happen—either a dull monotonous session will again go down on the records or the market will turn up. If it does not turn up I do not think it will turn down much and nothing will be lost by waiting till next Tuesday before acting.

New high prices for gold in the London market constitutes a development that bids fair to force the administration's hand as regards inflation.

As expected the soft pedal has been put on inflation talk in view of the pending federal financing project, but it is becoming increasingly more evident that actual inflation is unmistakeably very close at hand.

Harvesting Is Delayed By More Rainfall

WINNIPEG, Sept. 1.—Increased rainfall in southern Manitoba and southern Saskatchewan today threw another jolt into harvesting and curbed prospects of resumption of harvesting until the middle of next week.

Coming after general rainfalls in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba the previous 24 hours, today's rain and cloudy atmosphere seriously impaired harvesting operations. Cloudy and cool weather prevailed in Alberta with scattered showers.

But the pre-holiday spirit ruled on the Winnipeg grain exchange to check the influences of the bearish weather reports. At mid-session, prices were fluctuating sluggishly, with values ¼ cent lower. October futures sold at 81 3-8 cents a bushel; December, 82 3-8 cents and May 86 3-8 cents. Hedging pressure also offset the weather influence.

Lacombe Farmer Dies As Result Of Leg Injury

LACOMBE, Sept. 1.—John Stephenson, aged 65, died in Lacombe hospital at 9 p.m. Friday from shock and loss of blood resulting from injury when his team became frightened and ran away while he was oiling the cycle of his binder which he had not thrown out of gear. His right leg was badly mutilated and nearly cut off about three inches above the knee and he was dragged about 100 yards before his two sons who were working in the field released him. He was admitted to hospital at 5:30 p.m. He lived four and one-half miles north west of Blackfalds and has farmed there for 35 years.

Funeral arrangements have been completed. He leaves his wife and two grown-up sons.

Great Britisher is Not Expected to Find Much Opposition

FOREST HILLS, N.Y., Sept. 1.—Frederick J. Perry, British Davis cup hero and world's ranking No. 1 tennis player, was made an outstanding favorite yesterday to defend successfully the United States men's singles championship, starting today, despite some evidence of marked improvement in the homebred ranks.

Sidney B. Wood, Jr., of New York although "seeded" only third among the American players, behind Frank X. Shields and Wilmer Allison, is generally picked by the "railbirds" to make the strongest title bid of the home guard.

NELSON WINS IN MARATHON AT TORONTO

By A. E. FULFORD

TORONTO, Sept. 1.—Frigid waters of Lake Ontario were conquered yesterday as Marvin Nelson of Fort Dodge, Iowa, drove his 206 pounds with his powerful arms for 15 miles to capture the Canadian National Exhibition Marathon. For the third time Nelson donned the crown as professional swimming champion and proved himself the peer of them all in cold or warm water.

Only five finished the swim, held in water that registered below the 62 degrees, set in marathon rules by the exhibition as the minimum temperature for the grind. Today, however, Elwood Hughes, manager, received the swimmers' agreements to abolish this rule, and 90 crawl stroke artists plunged into the icy lake.

Behind Nelson, who won the race in 1930 and 1933, came another United States star, Bill Goll of New York, the "Singing Swimmer." Johnny Cairo, young Italian of Toronto, unknown in big time swimming circles, battled cold and exhaustion to finish in third place, one of the most startling upsets of the marathon's record.

Dan Dembicki, East Windsor, Ont., athlete, came in fourth, followed by Bill Sadlo of Corona, N. Y., who crawled from the water after 10 o'clock, more than 10 hours after the start.

EARNS $20,000

The big Fort Dodge natator has earned himself $20,000 in his three victories, $10,000 in 1930, $5,000 last year and $5,000 for his triumph yesterday. No other swimmer has ever captured the crown even twice and Nelson's three-time win marked him as without a peer in the field of athletics.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Hosea, chapters 6, 11, 14.

Micah was a prophet of God in the northern kingdom of Israel in the days when Isaiah was God's prophet to the southern kingdom of Judah, nearly seven and a half centuries before Christ. He was a fearless champion of the cause of the poor against their rich oppressors.

Copyright 1934 by Central Press Association, Inc.

To those who were falsely teaching that God was hard to please even with the sacrifice of their own children to fiery idols Micah said God required only that they "do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with God." He denounced the priests who "divine for money."

He rebuked the merchants for robbing the poor with their "scant measures." "The rich men are full of violence, and the inhabitants have spoken lies and their tongue is deceitful in their mouth." He said they were "plucking off their skin and the flesh from off their bones."

Micah prophesied where Christ should be born: "Thou Bethlehem, out of three shall be come forth that is to be ruler in Israel." He told of Christ's kingdom of peace and of a day when men would turn "swords into plowshares."

SPIRITUALISTS ARRANGE FOR LARGER HOME

Sunday Service Will be Held in Re-decorated Edifice

It is with great pleasure that the executive and members of the City Temple of Spiritualism announce that in future all services and activities will be held in surroundings more congenial and less liable to unnecessary noise.

Since the inception of spiritualism in Edmonton many moves have been carried out and at last the membership have decided to have a church building for their own.

Although its location is not so central, it is not difficult to reach. It is served by two car lines, within a block, that is the all red and all white, and is situated at 9315 103A Ave., near Armitage and McBain's Lumber Yard, Jasper East.

The building has been redecorated inside and it is planned to have the outside renovated at an early date.

The first meeting in this new home was held last night and on Sunday at 7:30 p.m. the regular Divine Service will be held, the speaker being J. Hancock, and the subject for the address will be "Spiritualism and the Bible."

This is in continuation of previous addresses, in which the speaker has endeavored to show what Spiritualism is, how it originated, its purpose, and why it has not been accepted by many of the old schools of theology and that it was fully understood and recognized in the days of the Old and New Testament.

Following the address Spirit descriptions will be given and an After Circle will also be held.

Whisky and Cannons Used In Old Politics

CARSON CITY, Nev. Sept. 1 — You know what to expect in the campaigns of political candidates this fall.

However, turn back seventy years and glance at what candidates did in 1864 as taken from old records of a campaign in Humboldt county:

The politicians used "three great freight wagons with platforms, beds and seats, with a grandstand in the centre on which stood a barrel of good old Kentucky whisky with a cup chained to it—drawn by eight, ten and twelve mules. A cannon on wheels drawn by four respectable jackasses, plenty of powder, a rawhide band, a quartet of singers, some Indians and some white men. Much noise, much speaking and much fuss, but no fighting."

LONDON, Sept. 1 — Major-General Ernest Alexander, who took a prominent part in British artillery operations from the beginning of the Great War, died Monday. He was 64.

GREAT NEED OF PREACHERS FOR PRAIRIES

Seventeen United Church Charges are Without Pastors

Seventeen United church charges in Saskatchewan and Alberta are now without pastors and an appeal has been issued through "The New Outlook" for eastern ministers to volunteer for service in these fields.

"At the present time there are a dozen fields vacant in Saskatchewan and five in Alberta, for which the superintendents are appealing for single, ordained men. We have been searching for this type of supply everywhere but as yet have not been successful in locating any available men. These fields in western Canada are not on the frontier, but have been established, most of them, for a number of years and many of them have comfortable furnished manses.

"Are there not some among our younger men in Ontario and the Maritimes who will answer this challenge? It does seem unfortunate that with a surplus of men in eastern Canada, our great church cannot minister to these needy areas in the west."

APOSTOLIC CHURCH HOLDS MEETINGS

The Apostolic Church of Pentecost is opening a branch church in the Dominion block opposite the Macdonald hotel. Rev. Wm. Deverill will conduct the first service on Sunday, September 2, at 7:30 p.m. Rev. Wm. Deverill came to Edmonton four years ago with the intention of starting a church but unforeseen circumstances interfered and he went to Rossington where a large tabernacle was erected to house a camp meeting. The camp-meeting has become an annual affair and last July many visitors from Edmonton were entertained. Due to the efforts of Rev. Deverill two churches with accompanying residences for pastors have been built within the past two years; one at Rossington and one near Jarvie.

The Apostolic Church was incorporated in Canada about fourteen years ago. Pastor Frank Small of Zion Church, Winnipeg is the moderator. Western towns and cities including Winnipeg, Regina, Moose Jaw and Saskatoon have seen mighty revivals under the ministers of the Apostolic Church. Among others, Pastor O. J. Lovick is specially worthy of note having opened many churches in Saskatchewan. Rev. O. J. Lovick visited Edmonton about ten years ago, representing the Apostolic Church.

Rev. Wm. Deverill will speak first in Edmonton on "The Great Need of the Church."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

One of the Scriptural quotations contained in the Christian Science Lesson-Sermon for tomorrow is: "But thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler of Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting" (Micah 5:2)

Madonna's Statue Overlooks Strait

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy, Sept. 1.—A twenty-foot statue of the Madonna, overlooking the far-away Strait of Messina between Sicily and Italy, suddenly was bathed in electric light as Pope Pius pressed a radio control button in the study of his summer villa.

The statue, erected to "Our Lady of the Letter," stands on the Messina waterfront. It is regarded as the crowning work, of the reconstruction that has been going on at Messina since the earthquake of 1908.

Following the illumination, the Pope transmitted by radio a benediction, in Latin, in which he invoked the protection of the Virgin. Paino of Messina, who directed erection of the statue, replied immediately by radio, thanking the Pope.

PASTORS FAVOR CALENDAR PROBE

A survey of Protestant clergymen in United States favor refrom of the calendar and a fixed Easter, according to a report issued by the World Calendar Association for the Universal Christian Council meeting this month in Fano, Denmark.

The proposed new calendar retains the twelve-month year, but regulates it into multiples of halves and quarters with each quarter consisting of three months of thirteen weeks or ninety-one days.

Each month has 26 week-days and each quarter has 13 Sundays.

The association advocating the reform points out that the revised calendar conforms to the seasons and stabilizes religious and secular holidays. The last day of the year is considered Year-End day as an extra Saturday between December 30 and January 1, and the 366th day in leap years is considered another extra Saturday between June 30 and July 1.

90 PER CENT FAVOR PLAN

A survey of 1,178 clergymen by the United Press brought 907 replies favoring the revised calendar in preference to a proposed 13 month calendar, and votes of 1,03[illegible] clergymen a fixed Easter. The survey was conducted in co-operation with the Universal Christian council of Churches.

The Right Rev. William T. Manning, Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New York, replied in the survey as follows:

"A fixed Easter and a reformed calendar is greatly to be desired for many reasons and the churches throughout Christendom should take the lead in this matter and express themselves through their governing bodies."

P'ATS and PANS by —BILL LEWIS—

Long connected with boxing in the East as a promoter, referee and manager, Mike "Kap" Kaplansky, well-known local sportsman, seems to have uncovered a real "find" in his current protege, young Eddie Wenstob . . . Forcing Jules Verquin's seconds to throw in the towel in the third round of last night's headline bout on Kap's show at the New Empire, Wenstob fully demonstrated in that short time that he has just about everything that's necessary to make a really top-notch battler.

Kaplansky has brought the youngster along at a rapid rate since signing to manage him and, following his performance last night, has great plans for the youngster. . . . A natural light-heavyweight who may even grow into a heavy, Wenstob has the kick of a mule in both hands, lots of speed and is developing into a polished boxer under the tutelage of Trainer Louis Lavoie. . . .

The revival of professional boxing here seems complete now. With a good turnout Friday for his first card, and a fine local fighter in Wenstob, Kap now intends to bring "Battling" Tracy, Western Canada light-heavy champion, here to meet his boy, probably some time this month. There are a lot of other good fighters who want to come here, too, which means there should be some fine attractions in the city this fall and the coming winter.

Murray Murdoch's Shastas got back into the thick of the fight for honors in their senior baseball series with Wetaskiwin when they marked up a 6-1 win last night. . . . Right now, the teams are all square on the round and tomorrow's game decides which will meet Cadomin in the second round of provincial playdowns. It's been a touch series and there is certain to be a real battle tomorrow before a winner is declared.

It was an impressive win last night for Lefty Plotts, who twirled his second victory of the series, allowing the opposition but three hits on each occasion. . . . The young southpaw had a lot on the ball and was master of the rival batsmen from beginning to end. Incidentally, Chief Rattlesnake, Wetaskiwin's ace portsider who has also two wins to his credit in this series, will be out to make it three in the final game tomorrow. The Chief has been highly impressive in his starts to date.

CELT RESTS AFTER DRILL ON THURSDAY

McLarnin Pleased With His Strenuous Train-in For Bout

By BOB CAVAGNARO

ORANGEBURG, N.Y., Sept. 1—Jimmy McLarnin took a bushman's holiday yesterday and talked about the assault he will make on Barney Ross' welterweight championship dynasty next Thursday.

The 26-year-old Vancouver belter was given the day off after going through a strenuous program Thursday. It wasn't exactly a day of rest because he arose at his customary hour seven a.m. and galloped over the three miles of country roads with Trainer Charley Schoeneman. Later McLarnin and Shoeneman set out on a 10-mile walk.

"I never felt so young in all my life," said the young veteran of 10 years of ring warfare, as he relaxed in his cottage a half mile from Gus Wilson's training camp.

Jimmy was reminded Ross not only expects to retain the title he lifted from Jimmy but anticipates doing it by a knockout.

"If Barney wants to think out loud, it's okay with me," he smiled. "Barney's a great fighter but I'm going to prove I won the last fight. The worst break I should have gotten was a draw."

Jimmy said he was at a great disadvantage when he met Ross last May. The two fighters had a private agreement that McLarnin was not to weigh more than 145 pounds. The responsibility of complying with the weight requirement preyed heavily on his mind and he weighed 2½ pounds under the limit.

"I wasn't over-confident in my last fight," he declared. "The trouble was having to make 145 pounds. We have no such agreement this time and I'll be at least 145 pounds when we meet next Thursday night.

"I'll be stronger. I'll be a much faster fighter, too, with a lot more endurance. I've changed my road work. In the past I'd merely trot for three or five miles. But for the past couple of weeks I've been alternating trotting with sprinting every half mile."

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 — Gene Sarazen and Joe Kirkwood, the professional golfing tourists, have completed plans to visit Australia and New Zealand this autumn and winter. They leave New York Monday for Chicago, then play a short series of exhibition matches in Canada, from Winnipeg to Vancouver, before sailing September 12 for the Antipodes by way of Honolulu.

A month later they will be reinforced by a half dozen professional associates in seeking Australian open championship honors. Craig Wood, Paul Runyan, Densmore Shute, Johnny Revolta, Harry Cooper and Ky Laffoon are booked to leave the west coast October 12 for Sidney.

College Gridiron Stars Hold Chicago Bears Scoreless

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—United States college all-stars of 1933 and the Chicago Bears played a scoreless tie in their pro. football battle at Soldier Field last night before 80,000 spectators. The all-stars had a shade in the duel.

The result was a moral victory for the all-stars, who actually outplayed the kingpins of pro. football, outgaining and out manoeuvring their more polished foes with dazzling speed and surprising co-ordination.

Both teams had chances to score, only to fail because of fumbles and intercepted passes.

COAST STARS SEEK TOTEM POLE TROPHY

Make Strong Bid For Title At Jasper Park Tourney

JASPER PARK LODGE, Sept. 1.—Vancouver made a strong bid for the famous Totem Pole trophy emblematic of the championship of the Jasper Park golf course, as she has two candidates in the running in the semi-finals on Friday. R. Arkell won his game with J. B. Faegre 4 and 3 while S. Powell lost to Jack Matson, hard-hitting left-hander of Victoria. Arkell and Matson will meet at ten o'clock on Saturday morning to begin the gruelling 36 holes to decide which will take the trophy and which will be runner up. One thing is certain the trophy's new home will be on the west coast.

Gallery interest was strong in the Matson-Powell match and while it was not as snappy and exciting as the Matson-Black game still the outcome was much in doubt to the 16th. Matson was one up on the long second with a birdie four. Powell squared the match at the third by chipping to the cup from a trap. The fourth and fifth were halved but Powell went ahead on the sixth when Matson putted three. The 7th was a half but Matson won the eighth with a par four and a grand second shot from the rough to be square again. They made the turn all square. Matson went one up on the 10th with a par when Powell got into difficulties in a trap. They halved the 11th.

The short 12th was another half the 13th and 14th Powell rimmed the cup with his second putt on the 15th and Matson went two up with a par. Powell took the 16th when Matson got into trouble with the lake. The 17th Powell squared the match when Matson missed a two foot putt for a half. Both were nicely on the 18th green in two and Matson laid his approach almost in the cup. Powell ran his past about five feet and when he missed coming back this gave the match to Matson who took a par four.

In the Arkell-Faegre game a series of bad putting by Faegre of Minneapolis, the lone American in the championship semi-finals gave Arkell an advantage. He was four up at the turn. Arkell was steady and took every advantage. At the 12th Faegre won back a hole with a nice drive on the green. The 13th was halved and at the 14th Arkell played safely and took the hole and match with a par.

Following the completion of the final on Saturday morning His Honor W. L. Walsh, Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta will present the prizes during the afternoon.

Finals in the 1st men's flight will be played between F. Sayward-Wilson, Victoria and N. E. White, Winnipeg.

He's Easy Winner

Ed. Wenstob, below, rising young protege of Mike Kapalansky, made an impressive debut in Edmonton last night when he won on a technical knockout over Jules Verquin, claimant of the light-heavyweight championship of France. Verquin's seconds threw in the towel to end the bout in the third round.

Cadomin To Start Play Here Monday

Coal Branch Ball Squad Will Play Winners of Ball Series

Arriving here last Thursday, Cadomin's pennant-seeking baseball club await and will watch with much interest the outcome of the Northern Alberta semi-final series now being contested between Shastas and Wetaskiwin. The Coal Branch team meets the winners of the semi-finals in a best three-of-five games series for the Northern Alberta senior amateur championship crown.

Should Shastas emerge the winner over Wetaskiwin, Cadomin will be prepared to face the local crew in two games on Monday to start their series.

On the other hand, should Clint Hodges' Wetaskiwin crew eliminate Shastas, Cadomin will meet the winners here on Monday for one game at Renfrew Park. The second game of the series might be played in Wetaskiwin.

ARE CONFIDENT

The invading miners have viewed both Shastas and Wetaskiwin in action in their semi game last night and are confident they have a lineup strong enough to give the winning team a stiff battle all the way through and they express no little amount of determination in their drive to the championship rung.

Many familiar faces are to be seen on the Cadomin squad, several of their players having been seen in action in the local league during the past few seasons.

Some local stars now playing under Cadomin colors are Nick Melnyk, Con. Doherty, Johnny Gerlitz, Ken Stewart and J. Doherty and they form an impressive band of ball tossers.

GERLITZ POPULAR

Gerlitz, as most Edmonton fans remember him, is an outfielder of no little repute and was one of the leading fly-chasers here last year, performing for last year's interprovincial champion Cubs.

Ken Stewart last year performed for South Side Athletics and was rated as a good backstop.

Con and J. Doherty, out of action here for some time, will be remembered by many local fans when they troop out of their dugout in Cadomin colors.

The personnel of the Cadomin team is as follows: First base, Nick Melnyk; second, W. Stene; short stop, Frank Lewis; third base, Con Doherty; outfielders, Johnny Gerlitz, Brave, James and J. Doherty. The catcher is Ken Stewart, who will be working pitchers, Mydanski, Benoit and Samson with Mydanski the leader of Cadomin's twirling staff.

Wetaskiwin Plays Shastas in Fifth Contest on Sunday

With the series all square at two wins each, Wetaskiwin and Shastas will play the fifth and deciding game of their best-of-five play-off in the provincial championship competition at Renfrew Baseball Park on Sunday afternoon, starting at three o'clock sharp.

The right to go into the second round of the playdowns and the Northern Alberta finals goes to the victor tomorrow.

The current series has proved one of the most closely-contested witnessed here in many years and a real fight is expected when they lock horns in the all-important game.

Chief Jimmy Rattlesnake, the Indian star who has scored both wins for his team thus far, will be pitching for Wetaskiwin, and he will likely be opposed by big Herman Loblick.

LAZZERI HITS HOME RUN AS YANKEES WIN

Victory Cuts Half Game Off Detroit's Lead In Pennant Race

The one swing, a home run wallop in the second inning, decided a mound duel between Charley (Red) Ruffing, and Jack Russell, sending the Yanks off to their second straight victory over Washington, 3-1.

York Hotel Nine Wins by Default

National Home Furnishers were eliminated from the Big Five Intermediate League race last night when they failed to field a team against York Hotel and thereby defaulted to the leaders by a 9-0 score.

The scheduled game last night was a replay of the game Furnishers won against York Hotel, but the league officials ruled the Hotelmen had intentionally lost the game and on this basis league officials ordered a replay. The Furnishers would not field a team and they are now out of the league race, leaving Gibbons, North Edmonton and York Hotel to battle it out for the championship.

North Edmonton and Gibbons will clash in their series shortly, with the winner meeting the league leading York Hotel nine for the championship.

LEFTY PLOTTS HURLS SECOND PLAYDOWN WIN

Murdochmen Regain Hitting Form to Blast 10 Hits off Kip Anderson; Catch by "Pep" Moon Feature of Defensive Play

Regaining their smashing hitting strength and playing great ball behind the three-hit pitching of Henry "Lefty" Plotts the Shastas deadlocked their provincial senior baseball playdown series with Wetaskiwin at two victories each last night at Renfrew Park when they whipped the visitors by 6-1 in seven innings.

A fifth and deciding game is now to be played here Sunday afternoon to determine the team that will go into the next round of the playdowns against Cadomin on Monday, Labor Day.

Wetaskiwin won the first contest, 7-4; lost the second, 4-3; won the third, 2-1; and then Shastas won last night to square the series.

SECOND THREE-HIT GAME FOR PLOTTS

With Plotts pitching his second three-hit performance of the play-off, Murray Murdoch's men broke loose on a great batting rampage to collect no less than 10 safeties from the offerings of Anderson, another southpaw, and completely submerged the invaders.

Shastas dominated the game from first to last as they fought to get on even terms with the team from the south and force a fifth tilt. They scored one run in the second inning, two in the third and again in the fourth and finished off with a single marker in the sixth. Wetaskiwin's lone tally came in the sixth, an overthrow to second allowing Hodges to score from third base.

Plotts was unbeatable all the way. He permitted only one double and two single-base blows in the seven innings that were played. The visitors could do nothing with the deliveries of the youthful portsider, who had plenty of speed and a curve ball that was working exceptionally well. He was troubled slightly by wildness in the late stages but this was not enough to affect his sparkling work even a little bit.

MOON'S GREAT CATCH

The almost perfect support accorded the local pitcher aided a lot in the win, too. Pep Moon, used in right field, provided the fielding highlight of the battle in the sixth frame. After misjudging a fly in the fifth, he came back with a catch that brought the fans out of their seats to give him a great round of applause. Bergen hit a short Texas-leaguer to right that seemed like a certain hit but Moon, racing in at top speed, made an absolute dive along the ground to get his glove under the ball and come up with it safely, turning a complete somersault in the process. It was perhaps the most sensational catch seen in Renfrew Park to date.

Hopper, with two singles and a sacrifice in the three times he went to the plate, and Bud Abbey and Hanger Guidolin each with a pair of blows in three tries were the hitting stars of the game.

There was plenty of distance hitting, Kerr and Abbey getting three-base knocks and Hess, Moon, Henderson and Guidolin rapping out two-baggers.

Anderson, making his second start of the series on the hillock for Wetaskiwin, could not keep his blows sufficiently well scattered to hope for a win.

HOW THEY SCORED

Hits by Hess and Hopper paved the way for a run in the second inning to send Shastas off in to the lead. In the next stanza, Moon's double, Kerr's triple and an error by Hodges gave them two more. A single by Sillars, a three-bagger by Abbey and a marvelous sacrifice by Hopper on a squeeze play gave the locals another pair of markers and increased the margin to 5-0.

Wetaskiwin counted their lone run in the first half of the sixth when Hodges singled, went to third on Anderson's hit, and then scored when Sillars threw high to second in an effort to catch Anderson.

The scoring wound up in the last half of that inning. Eaton, in right field for Wetaskiwin, let Hopper's fly get past him and the latter pulled up at second base. Hanger Guidolin came through with a two-base wallop at this stage to drive Hopper over the plate with the last tally.

Play was called on account of darkness after the invaders had batted in the seventh stanza.

GRIT JUNIORS MUST CAPTURE GAME SUNDAY

Safeway Squad Can Win City Title At Boyle Street Lot

Clayton McLennan's Grits must take a winning margin in Sunday's game at Boyle Street lot when they face Safeways and certain elimination from the city championship series should they lose the scheduled Junior league play-off clash against the bitter rivals. The game will start at 2 o'clock.

With a two game lead in the best three-of-five series, Safeways are confident they can turn back Grits in the fourth game of the series and thereby claim the city championship. Grits have still to win a game, having lost two and drawn only one and it will be a hard assignment winning three straight games in order to claim the honors.

Russell Wynn is likely to twirl for Grits while Tommy Brant will be Coach Jack Bartley's choice to do mound duties for Safeways.

WENSTOB WHIPS VERQUIN ON TECHNICAL KNOCKOUT

By BILL LEWIS

A glistening young human tiger—who didn't know how to back up but thought only of ripping into the black-thatched head that always sought to be covered up, last night stole the whole show as professional boxing was revived in Edmonon with a card at the New Empire theatre.

The tigerish young man was Eddie Wenstob, a Viking light-heavyweight who is now a protege of the local sportsman, Mike Kaplansky, promoter of the night's program.

With the speed and devastating effects of a tornado, Wenstob tore into Jules Verquin, claimant of the French light-heavyweight championship, right from the start and forced his seconds to throw a towel into the ring to end the bout after little more than 30 seconds of fighting in the third round.

CERTAIN VICTIM FOR A KNOCKOUT

Grim and deadly as a jungle-cat in battle, Wenstob chased the Calgarian about the ring for the first two rounds, battering him with both hands in a fierce attack that left him weak and groggy, an almost certain victim for a knockout if the bout had progressed much further than it did. However, soon after the third round commenced and the flailing assault of Wenstob continued without the slightest letup, Verquin's second tossed in a towel and leaped into the ring to prevent any further punishment to his fighter.

Twice in the first round Verquin went to his knees as Wenstob lashed him with lefts and rights that were ladened with dynamite.

In the second, the former Viking boy became even more fierce with his attack and his pile-driving fists had the southerner cringing and covering up repeatedly. In this round he went down for a count of nine from a terrific right hook and then later took a count of seven as Wenstob plastered him with both hands.

ENDS SUDDENLY

Sensing victory as the third opened, Wenstob increased rather than slackened his pace, and at this stage the towel flicked into the ring, followed by Verquin's second in person. There was then nothing left for Referee Miles Palmer and the judges to do but award the fight to the local larruper.

Wenstob, in victory, was impressive in every way. He fully demonstrated that he can punch, and punch hard, with either hand; that he has the necessary speed for a fighter; and, above all, the fighting instinct that is so much needed to make a top-ranking star.

His win, too, earned him a chance at the Western Canada light-heavyweight championship. Kaplansky had promised the winner a shot at the titleholder—Battling Tracy, of Winnipeg—and he is more than pleased that his own fighter is the one to get the chance. He plans to stage the bout in Edmonton, possibly some time this month.

HOLM BEATS DOLAN

In the semi-windup, Pete Holm of Lacombe, earned a decision in eight rounds over Mickey Dolan, swarthy welterweight from Portland. Hitting at longer range and holding his rival off whenever he got dangerous, Holm gained a wide margin of points. Dolan did not appear in the best of shape and, while he cracked Holm hard on a few occasions, did not have the necessary pep to stay even with him through the battle.

Johnny Smith, product of Edmonton amateur boxing, scored a technical knockout over Don Wells, of Penhold, in the first round of their preliminary bout. Showing all the power and class that made him a great favorite in his amateur days, Smith quickly got the jump on the Penhold youngster and sent him crashing to the floor with a hard right. Wells climbed slowly to his feet in a daze but, instead of continuing the fight, wandered out of the ring and had to be steered back in, still unconscious concerning what was going on. Smith was awarded the bout then on a technical kayo.

VIKING BOY WINS

A promising young fighter from Viking, George Scott, won a four-round decision over Mushy Callahan, of Calgary, in the opening preliminary. Scott, a hard-hitting, aggressive boxer, took the lead on points right from the first round, and was a deserving winner over the southern boy.

Prior to the semi-windup, Mayor Thunnell, of Viking, was introduced to the crowd by Announcer Jack Horler. Mr. Thunnell, who fought here during Kid Scaler's days as a promoter, gave a short address, in which he expressed the appreciation of the smaller centres for the assistance their shows received from Promoter Kaplansky in the way of refereeing.

SOFTBALLERS IN FINAL TILT HERE SUNDAY

Calgary Champions Will Meet Beavers, Boyle Street Lot

Toronto Stars of Calgary, winners of the southern bracket of the 1934 provincial intermediate men's softball semi-finals, will play in Edmonton on Sunday and Monday in four games to decide the provincial title and according to advance notices received from the team in Calgary the Stars will give the local Beavers some of the toughest opposition they have received this year.

"Stars" made a great record in the south as they swept into the Alberta finals. Besides eliminating 17 other clubs in Calgary the newsies defeated Swallwell by a wide margin and then took two straight victories against Lethbridge in the provincial semi-finals, both games being played away from home.

CALGARY STRONG

The Calgarians will present an array of fine athletes that includes Tom Bradford, southpaw hurler who holds the Calgary strikeout record with a mark of 23, two other put outs and an assist being credited to him in the same game, and Dunc. McGregor, right-handed relief pitcher who also has a fine record.

Behind the bat will be either Henry Leinweber, of the 1933 intermediate champion White Spots, or Art Alexander, known better in Edmonton for his prowess in intermediate basketball circles. "Gobbo" Gilkes, of junior rugby fame in Calgary, holds down the first base position while the remainder of the infield is made up of Del Folger, Albert Malkin and Bob Bailie. In the outfield will be found Dave Smith, Hank Olsen, Fletch Townsend, Jimmy Eagleson, Monel Gerlitz and Fred Kromm.

GRUNT-GROAN CARD PLANNED FOR SEPT. 11

Promoter Mike Cutcher Has Strong Wrestling Program Billed

A program of middleweight wrestling bouts, which will see eight fast and colorful middleweights contesting in four well-matched bouts, is the card Promoter Mike Cutcher has billed here for Tuesday, September 11, at the Memorial Hall.

Des Anderson, well-known performer on the Pacific coast and throughout the central States, is matched with Bob Cummings, equally as well known in all wrestling circles, for the main event. Both fighters come here with no little reputation and have given pleasing performances in their bouts up and down the Pacific coast circuit.

For the semi-windup Mike has matched Karl Martin and Billy Spendlove, both well-known wrestling performers, while Gil Knutson, local product, is matched with Young Tarzan in a preliminary joust.

Another local fighter will be Jack Jackson, who will grapple with Frank Hall in a preliminary bout. Jackson, as many will remember, was one of the two performers in a preliminary bout a short time ago who gave the crowd some real action and proved himself a real matman.

Special Planes Will Be Built

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Bids for 25 aeroplanes that will almost land themselves, and that cannot fall or spin, were opened Monday by the Bureau of Air Commerce in an effort to turn a new page in the history of private flying in the United State.

Planes will cost from $750 to $6,670.

RECORD PRICE IN DOUBLE BET AT 'PEG MEET

Daily Double Price is High Mark of $1,943 Opening Day

POLO PARK, Winnipeg, Sept. 1.—What a day! Temperature at winter-underwear point, an overcoat piercing wind. From 4:35 onward steady rain of the wettest kind. Certainly the worst August afternoon in the memory of racegoers.

A surprisingly large crowd attended Polo Park undeterred by a dismal, gloomy forenoon to welcome the racehorses back again. The fields were of limit proportions in six of the races, with all kinds of things happening to reduce the customers to a state of deep despair.

Only one favorite won during the afternoon and that probably too late to save the situation for plenty of the speculators. The victory of Aspin Smile, market choice in the closing marathon, was the occasion for loud and prolonged cheering from the sorely tried lads and lassies.

If Frank K. had not been in the mutuel "field" in the opener he would have paid more than 6½ to 1, probably 16½ to 1. As it was, his victory ruined 96 per cent. of the daily double tickets. When the 7½ to 1 chance Escostar scored in the third sprint it was hardly a surprise when a big reward was posted on the daily double board. But few were prepared for a local record price of $1,943. It was very soon public news that only one person had it—a lady. Madam had left her husband at home nursing a damaged hand; envious ones declare she got mixed up when exchanging her first-winning-half ticket and asked for the ultimate winner's number by mistake.

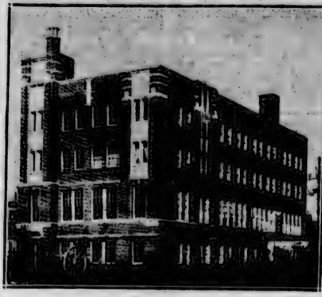
Opens Next Tuesday



Alberta College will re-open for the 1934-1935 academic year on Tuesday next, September 4. Since the foundation of the college in 1903, about 32,000 students have passed through the classes. The college is under the direction of Rev. F. S. McCall, D.D., who has been principal since 1913.

Alberta College Faces 32nd Year With Confidence

Having made a name for itself in Western Canada as the "Opportunity School," Alberta College enters on its 32nd year of progress with a noble record of service to 32,000 students who have passed through its halls.

Combining enterprise with stability, this pioneer educational centre has, since almost the opening of the century, given the highest type of instruction to young men and women, always providing a cultural background upon which training for a course of life has been built.

Under the expert and kindly guidance of Dr. F. S. McCall, who this year enters his 22nd term as principal, Alberta College will open for another season on Tuesday, September 4.

Situated on the north bank of the North Saskatchewan river, in the centre of the city, the college occupies a commanding position, readily accessible to all parts of the city.

For young men and women seeking positions in the world of commerce, the finest equipment and instruction are offered, the courses being given under the direction of the most highly skilled instructors. Last minute methods are taught, with the demands of modern business keenly followed.

GOOD START

Throughout the province men and women in the highest business positions credit their success to the solid grounding received at Alberta College.

The accountancy course, in which up-to-date practices are taught, provides training for those preparing for any accountancy examination and for those who do not intend to sit for an examination but wish to qualify for higher business appointments.

In the stenographic and secretarial courses, Isaac Pitman shorthand is taught, while all allied subjects, including typing, stenciling, correspondence, office routine, filing, dictaphone, penmanship and spelling are given. The secretarial course is an advanced training, recommended for students who have good academic standing.

Alberta College maintains an appointments department in order to advance still further the interests of the students and graduates. This is a real active organization whereby every qualified student of the college is afforded an opportunity of entering the services of firms that pay adequately for services rendered and afford scope for a successful career.

The academic department provides the basis of a broad, general education, with complete preparation for matriculation to university and normal entrance.

GRADE COURSES

Public school courses began at grade four and a rigid line of work is avoided, special attention being given to the individual needs of the students. It is possible for pupils to cover two or more grades in one year, while backward students are specially coached, to assist them with individual difficulties.

New Canadians are given special attention, the College having regard for language difficulties, with a view to helping them to become happy and useful citizens.

The conservatory of music aims to advance the art of music by providing in each department specialists of unquestioned ability and reputation, who will not only maintain the high musical traditions of the College in the past, but also promote knowledge and appreciation of the art in the community. Training is provided in all branches, pianoforte, vocal, organ, theory, violin, viola, fretted instruments and orchestral instruments.

Expression and dramatic art are given attention in the cultural department, with a course designed to secure a thorough mastery of mind, voice and body, essential to all speaking professions.

The finest residential accommodation is provided for girls, ladies, boys and young men. Teachers live in the college and contribute to make the home life of the students all that is desirable.

Residential accommodation is available for over 60 in the girls' and ladies' dormitories, with extra facilities for physical training and dancing through the Y.W.C.A.

MEN'S RESIDENCE

In the main building and McDougall Hall, residence is provided for 70 men students. This is especially advantageous for students coming from the country and who have to reside in the city.

Y.M.C.A. privileges are provided to resident students, with physical classes twice a week and use of the gymnasium and swimming pool.

Athletic facilities include a skating and hockey rink, as well as grounds for football, baseball, tennis and basketball.

Since the organization of the College in 1903 it has always been the aim of the authorities to create and maintain a religious atmosphere and to give the young peaple a vision of life and its responsibilities, that they will go out better fitted for Christian service and for the type of leadership so necessary in Western Canada.

Students desiring advice as to courses and facilities may call on Dr. McCall, who will be pleased to give advice and information.

ELSTON COLLEGE ADDS SUBJECTS TO CURRICULUM

An amazing record of expansion, the result of fine service to students in the past, has marked the progress of Edmonton College, formerly Elston Business College. Under its new name the institution gives instruction in many new phases of education, called for by popular demand, following outstanding training given heretofore in commercial subjects only. Edmonton College opens its fourteenth term on Tuesday, September 4.

David Elston began his work as a business educator in Edmonton when he was engaged in 1907 to teach in the commercial department of Alberta College, late being appointed principal, in which position he continued until the outbreak of the Great War.

During the war years Mr. Elston was engaged by the Dominion government, Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, to supervise the advanced commercial training in the S.C.R. schools in Edmonton, Calgary and Frank, for returned disabled men.

This work completed, Mr. Elston followed publicity work, visiting all larger centres of Canada except the Maritimes. In 1921 the Elston Business College was opened in Edmonton and, in 1923, the beautiful College residence at 9942 106 street, was opened. Here out-of-town students are provided board, room and laundry at reasonable cost.

For five consecutive years, students trained by Mr. Elston have been awarded gold medals for excellence in penmanship by the Business Journal of New York City. As an expert on forged and disputed documents he frequently gives evidence for the crown, the Mounted Police and law firms.

Additional departments, giving instruction in music, art, languages, journalism and elocution have been opened and this larger institution has been named Edmonton College. The college offers students profitable work (not canvassing) and many have used this plan to pay tuition charges in whole or part.

When ill, Ontario citizens may telegraph their symptoms to the provincial health department and a doctor will prescribe through the microphone.

McTavish Business College Completes Twenty-ninth Year

McTavish Business College is one of the oldest and best known schools of its kind in western Canada. It was opened in 1905—just twenty-nine years ago. During all these years of service and progress it has been the unwavering purpose of this school to provide the most thorough training to those seeking the latest and most approved methods in practical education.

The successful conduct of modern business requires an orderly, systematic and accurate knowledge of modern methods. The training offered in this school includes the maximum of value in commercial education at a minimum expenditure of time, money and effort. It is a special school.

The general purpose of all courses offered by McTavish College is to develop the usefulness and earning capacity of ambitious young men and women, to make them skilful in handling the routine duties of office positions and to give them the practical knowledge that will lead to rapid and satisfactory promotion.

Good teachers are the very backbone and life of a school. Every instructor in McTavish College meets the requirement which in the individual welfare and advancement of each student.

It is not the design of this school to offer a short, superficial course. The training given here meets the demands of the business world and qualify the student for higher and better paid positions. That this course fulfills its purpose is evidenced by the continued popularity of the school.

A new term will begin in both day and night school, September 4.

Your Children

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

The mother of a new baby is worried.

"His daddy doesn't pay any attention to him," she says. "He doesn't like his crying, and he doesn't like it if he spits up. He also fusses because I have to have our room cluttered with things for the baby—cluttered, he calls it, although I have a place for everything.

O. R. Barton

"It hurts me terribly to see him taking so little interest in our new son. It seems that he can't get over being a bachelor and having everything run as it used to, and as it always has for him all his life."

She is not the only mother of a first baby who has puzzled over this baffling situation. Many men give the impression of impatience or at least disinterest when a small intruder invades the peace and personal comfort of a home. It is not at all unusual.

FIRST THRILL WANES

Men who seem to be thrilled beforehand occasionally collapse like a burst balloon when fatherhood becomes a fact. All this in spite of the urge for continuity, for perpetuation, one of the basic instincts, second only to self.

Mark this latter truth, please "second to self." There is nothing to be criticized. It is a law of nature that the most noble cannot always break easily. In the female the love that infuses a mother at the birth of a child, or very shortly after, inverts the order. In a very few days or weeks she knows that she would give her life willingly for the sake of the little mite that depends on her so helplessly.

And the same thing happens to a man. But very often the transition is more deliberate. He will pass around the cigars, shove out his chest and boast loudly of the newcomer. This much is honest. He has a decided feeling of pride and ownership. But that matter of love that worries his wife so much may take a bit longer.

MOTHER LOVE IS DIFFERENT

If the new mother worries, as often as not the recently endowed father who finds love tardy, does, too. He keeps wondering why he cannot feel some magic spell that draws tears of joy to his eyes, or the pain that hurts when he thinks of the pink bundle in its crib.

"There must be something the matter with me," he decides. "I am not like other men. I must be a heartless brute."

He need not worry, nor need his wife. The weeks that follow along, as weeks do always work the spell. Wait until the little eyes follow him as he moves. Wait until a little damp hand holds fast one day to his finger, until a shadow of a smile wafts softly over the tiny face. Watch this heretofore unconcerned man fall so hard in love with that baby, his head will spin.

Sometimes it happens quickly after birth, sometimes it takes a bit longer. Some dads even seem to hold out deliberately until a child can creep or walk. But happen it does and will. Don't worry.

ROMANCE FROM FAR NORTH IS AIRED IN U.S.

Marital Mixup Winds up in San Francisco Court Over Children

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1 — A strange marital mixup resulting from a Canadian romance was told in superior court here Thursday when Max T. Francis petitioned for reversal of a decision granting the custody of his five-year-old daughter, Maxine Lucille Turcotte Francis to her mother, Lucille Turcotte.

Attorneys related the romance between Francis and Mrs. Turcotte began several years ago in the Hudson Bay region of Canada.

Francis, a married man, met Mrs. Turcotte, also wedded, and later they went to San Francisco, where on Dec. 9, 1929 a daughter was born to them.

BOTH DIVORCED

Then they decided to divorce their respective husband and wife and be married. Francis obtained a divorce here and Mrs. Turcotte, with money provided by him, returned to Canada and divorced her husband.

When she returned here after five months' absence, attorney told Superior Judge I. L. Harris, she found Francis had married another woman. She was given temporary custody of her daughter.

Later Mrs. Turcotte, failing to find work, boarded an aeroplane and went to Vancouver, B.C., where she entrained for the home of her parents in the Hudson Bay country.

COURTS TOO SLOW

"The courts were too slow," the mother wrote to her attorney here. "I want my child. I love my daughter and I hope the courts will stretch a point so I can keep her."

In his appeal, Francis told the court he could provide a better home for the child than its mother could.

"You dissolve the order and I will go to Canada and bring the child back." Francis said. "It doesn't matter how I get her. I will get her."

TERRAPLANE CARAVAN IS BACK IN CITY

Alberta Looks Good to Tourists After Long Trip

The three Edmonton families that set out from here on June 28 in Terraplanes and Barrie Built Cruisers have all returned to town and they are chorusing "Alberta looks good to us."

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Barrie, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Kelly and Mr. and Mrs. Jack McLean travelled together from Edmonton in their respective cars and cruisers, a combined distance of over 21,000 miles since leaving the city three months ago and they all agree that Alberta and especially Edmonton is about the best place they have seen since they headed south for the land of sunshine and movie stars—not to mention strikes and hard times.

In Portland they were forced to flee the city while their gasoline tanks still contained enough to take them on their way—it being impossible to buy enough gas to fill a cigaret lighter on account of the longshoremen's strike. Eighty miles from San Francisco they were advised to detour and pass that fair city up—on account of another strike, and the fact that some playful strong men might take it into their heads to turn their cars upside down, just for exercise.

But all in all, the trip was really enjoyable and the Barrie Cruisers proved a real home away from home. Crops, over the line are mostly very poor and fodder scarce except in a few localities in the territory covered.

Mr. Wilson inspected the field and said that markers and other improvements would be made.

Chickie's Daughter

By ELENORE MEHERIN

CHAPTER 67

Pippin repeated, dazed: "Hildegarde Kamla has arrived in New York? Who told you?"

Kathleen stood before her mirror, smoothing the coil of her smokey black hair.

"How do you know she comes to America for Kevin?"

Kathleen shrugged: "He's been home five months. She's written at least twice a week. Every time Bob Nolan sees me he twits me about the nice German sister-in-law I'm going to have. Seeing that Bob is married to a German and a friend of Hildegarde's, he should know. They were both nurses in the clinic!"

Said Pippin with more heat than caution: "Kevin hasn't the slightest intention of marrying her!"

"Well—it's a very remarkable coincidence that Kevin goes East at the very moment Hildegarde arrives. As a matter of fact, he's kept clear of women since he's been home. The first few weeks he gave Jane Carew a tumble or two; he hasn't taken a girl out since, except you and, of course, that's perfectly safe and won't involve him any."

Pippin offered quietly, but her heart made a vast thunder in her ears: "We don't even know that Kevin ever cared for Hildegarde! More than likely it's all a lot of gossip!"

Pippin scarcely saw the play that Saturday afternoon. She was rehearsing with a memory grown utterly merciless all the love words Kevin had ever said to her. She shut her eyes stubbornly against any scene where Kevin wooed the pretty German girl. Not a word of it was true! He told her plain as man could say it, she was the one he loved; she the one he wanted. Let the whole world carry tales. She knew!

So she continued writing. Every day she wrote him a letter and never mentioned the news she had heard.

Nor did he say anything of a girl named Hildegarde. His letters grew short—hurried. But he was busy. And the letters were exciting. They were very dear.

The following Friday Kathleen said: "Why don't you give Jim Crosby a break? I think he's a peach of a fellow. It wouldn't hurt you to give him a date. Call him up and we'll all go dancing tonight."

But Pippin wouldn't. She had given her promise to Kevin. That promise would be kept.

Saturday she had lunch with Kathleen. Kathleen looked dejected and on the bring of tears.

"I met Bob Nolan and his German bride at the St. Francis last night. They were quite excited that Hildegarde has arrived here. They think Kevin went East just to meet her and laughed when I mentioned the hospital and buying equipment."

Pippin said, cold and very grim: "Is Kevin telling his business to them? He thinks Nolan an old woman for gossip!"

She set her face like stone against the evidence. Had he not taken her in his arms and his eyes—his flashing, imperious, beautiful eyes going down like plummets to her very soul? Had he not said, "Love me always, sweetheart!" with his lips closing in sacred tenderness on hers?

The sweet high truth of this holy moment, she would not stain.

But ten days passed. She received no letters.

"He's busy; he had to go to Boston. I don't need this petty kind of devotion!"

On Friday night, Janina came for dinner. Dr. Fritz Meyer, a friend of David's, was also present. Pippin loved to see Janina and Dr. Meyer flaying each other with brilliant, slashing wit. Janina had read and read, but everything took on the color of her vivid, original mind. The conversation would run from Adam and Eve through the Nordic myth to the economic revolution. All of interest to the seeking mind from the hope of immortality to the chance, of bridging the stars, they glowingly assailed.

Tonight they touched on mortality—new and old.

"The world expects too much of sex," Janina said. "The man attracted by a woman physically imagines that he need only marry her to be happy ever afterwards. By some inexplicable magic, sex is supposed to open the portal to spiritual and intellectual joy. There's no more reason why the love relation should bring happiness than that a partnership in the bond business should.

"Love yields enough. We should be grateful for the rich emotional quality it weaves into the tapestry of life. Accept it for what it is—one of the grandest of our hungers; a superb goad to higher effort but don't mistake it as the gate to an ever-lasting paradise."

Dr. Meyer turned to David and inconsequently said: "I saw our young friend Malone in New York. He is marrying, I suppose?"

"Why, I don't know," David answered blankly. "I haven't heard so."

"But that Miss Kamla who was his friend in Germany is here now. I met them together at dinner and again at the symphony. I think it is a match. A charming, intelligent girl."

Pippin felt her mother's eyes go with a rush over her face. She went on talking to Janina and pretended not to have heard

They went to the living-room for coffee. Pippin stole to the garden. It was a clear blue night in the first of May. The sky was all fluttered with silver clouds; the stars blew down to the water.

She leaned against a flowering quince. It was all in radiant bloom. The blossoms, gleamed faintly in the moonlight.

She stood there holding her mind cold and her heart still. What of it—a dinner—a symphony? He would do this, of course, for a friend in a strange land.

But with subtle poison a thought crept round and round in her mind. He wouldn't ask her to give up other men.

He said: "I wish I had the right to ask it!"

"I haven't."

She thought that meant he had no money; no assurance for the future. Did it mean something else?

"You haven't been to see me for weeks, Pippin. I get lonesome. You make me feel young. I look at you and fancy you're Chickie and we're two girls together again. You're so like her."

"She was much prettier, Janina, and so much sweeter."

"I like you just as well. I like the hard, independent streak in you. It's a better way to be."

Pippin felt the blood chill about her neck; felt tears come stinging to her eyes. Janina guessed she loved Kevin! Janina was telling her to be strong; not to let herself be hurt; never to admit it no matter how great the pain.

But she was NOT hurt. She believed in him!

She rushed home from her classes and took her letters slowly from the box in the upper hall. But now it was fourteen days and he didn't write.

She sorted over letters from Bill and two from Gregg sent from ports along his route. She noticed a brown stain along the flap of an envelope—as though it had been burnt. She ran her finger along this.

But she thought, mutinous, of Kevin's hands loitering with love over her face. He cared! Till the end of time she would believe it!

Kathleen said: "He wrote mother that Hildegarde is in New York. They went to a concert together. I suppose he's preparing us for the blow."

"Why should it be a blow, Kathie? She may be the finest girl in the world. And surely he may take her to a concert without meaning to marry her."

"But she writes her friends that she comes to America because here is her heart. He may be through with her; she may not be through with him. Who knows what hold she has? Do you think a girl is writing across her photograph, 'Think back to our love, always yours!' unless there were more to it than murmurs in the moonlight?"

"It's none of our business!"

Pippin turned to her desk and tore viciously at a letter from Bill. Paragraphs jumped at her.

"So dearest, my dear, I'm all discharged and free. I've settled my mother's affairs. You know this stock market, wobbling as it did, made a bit of readjustment necessary. You'd be surprised how smart I was. Now I've nothing to do for the rest of my days but love you and make you glad. Do you doubt that I can? How soon you will believe!

"Save me next Saturday night and be as you were the day I left. How often I've thought of that sweetness. Driving down in the middle of the night as you did, Pippin, told something.

"Let me believe it told what I so long to hear . . . and you do care. Well—a little then! I've bought you a ring—not for anything serious—but just that you may remember a night in the wilderness which was precious but too short. I love you—too much."

Harvesting is in full swing in the district. The crop will be light, as the rainfall this season was the lightest ever known here.

A Bible School is being held in the Nazarene Church, with the Misses Grace and Ruth McDowell of Stettler and Miss Ruth Simms assisting Rev. and Mrs. Olsen.

Nation's Leaders Attend Funeral Of Grant Hall

MONTREAL, Sept. 1.—Fully representative of the dominion's many-sided business activities was the unusually large gathering of mourners at funeral services here today for Grant Hall, veteran Canadian railroader and vice-president of the Canadian Pacific railway.

Leaders in commerce, industry and the professions gathered to pay their last respects to Mr. Hall. Perhaps even more indicative of the high esteem in which he was held in all spheres was the vast representation of labor unions and associations

Conducting the service held in St. George's church, of which Mr. Hall was a lifelong member, were Rt. Rev. Bishop Farthing of Montreal, assisted by Lord Bishop Lennox Williams of Quebec, and Rev. F. B. Stas, assistant pastor of St. George's.

Big Trout Catch From Clearwater

RIMBEY, Sept. 1.—W. J. Cooke, E. George and E. Platt returned to Rimbey with a good catch of trout in a one-day fishing trip to the Clearwater river, 90 miles south and west of here.

Neal D. Maclean, K.C., and H. Milton Martin, of Edmonton, were business visitors in Rimbey on Wednesday.

SIGN FUNERAL FOR THE DEAF

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 1.—Sign language was used by the Rev. Homer E. Grace, pastor of the All Souls Mission for the Deaf, in preaching the funeral service for Billy Tuskey, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Tuskey of 2839 West 34th Ave., who died at the Denver General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Tuskey are deaf, which is the reason why the sign language sermon was given.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD
by William Ferguson
FROGS
SHOWERS OF FROGS HAVE OCCURRED FREQUENTLY IN HISTORY!! WHIRLWINDS SUCK UP THE SMALL CREATURES FROM PONDS AND DROP THEM MANY MILES AWAY.
IN THE MALAY COUNTRIES IS FOUND A FLYING FROG, WHICH GLIDES THROUGH THE AIR FROM TREE TO TREE.
IF MAN COULD JUMP AS WELL IN PROPORTION TO SIZE AS DOES THE FROG, NO BROAD JUMP RECORD UNDER 200 FEET WOULD BE SAFE.
FROGS EAT INSECTS, BUT WHILE IN THE TADPOLE STAGE THE SITUATION IS REVERSED! MANY A TADPOLE HAS LOST A LEG OR A TAIL IN THE JAWS OF A HUNGRY INSECT.... BUT THE SEVERED MEMBERS ARE REPLACED BY NEW ONES EACH TIME.
